The brilliant work of Capt. How-land, Bowdoin goalie, forced Bates to accept a second 2-1 defeat at the hands of the Polar Bear. Time and again the Bates offensive surged up to the Bowdoin goal only to be repulsed by the fine stick work of Howland.

Bowdoin took the lead in the first period when Topolosky stopped a long shot from Tiemer but then accidentally dropped the puck into the cage. A few seconds later Tiemer clinched the game with a shot by the corner of the net. The Garnet rallied and made a desperate effort to retrieve the game. John Cogan and Capt. Pooler were all over the ice and their brand of play was certainly worthy of a better result. The lone Bates tally also came in the first period when Cogan slipped one by Howland from scrim-

Winter Sports at Bates despite the prevalent idea to the contrary, is still a thriving college activity and during the coming winter months a very attractive and worth-while program has been planned by the Winter Sports squad. Although collegiate competition in Maine is not what it might be yet this fact does not hinder the Bobat's winter playtime year metavially. cat's winter playtime very materially. Home competition will be opened on Feb. 2nd when the biggest thing in the U.S. in shoeshoes will be staged right out on our own Garcelon Field. As host to the Canadian Snowshoe Club the Garnet will compete on snowshoes in everything from short dashes to a mile run. The annual Winter Carnival sponsored by the Outing Club will take place on Feb. 16th and is sure to be one of the most brilliant functions of the college year. Invitations will be sent to the other Maine colleges to compete with the Garnet team during the Carnival and there is every reason to believe that the colleges will respond to this invitation. The ski men who are practicing under the direction of Ben Chick '31 take long jaunts over hill and dale. Most of the men had experience last year. Immonen, C. SO WE WONDER

During the past few days the campus has been gloating over all sorts of scare rumors which, as Mark Twain cabled home concerning the report of his death,-have been greatly exaggerated. We have been regaled with all sorts of stories concerning overflowing infirmaries, overworked nurses, and all the attendant evils. One could easily have believed that this institution was on the verge of dire disaster.

There were knocks from every side concerning the apparent unwillingness, or utter inability, as it was variously interpreted of the College authorities to provide adequate space for the sick, shows he is in fine condition. or service for them. It was apparently not known that the administration had already considered turning the space in Chase Hall into an emergency infirmary and had abandoned the project, not because they were unwilling or unable to go through with it, but merely because the epidemic was not found to be sufficient to warrant such an establishment. Already there are spare accommodations, at least in the men's infirmary, and Miss Badger reports that all her patients are being cared for as they should be.

Of course, infirmary space is not the only thing to be considered in thinking over the present situation. To be told, for instance, to avoid mass meetings while packed into the College Chapel would be rather more farcial if the danger of contagion in just such gatherings were not so great; and there is always, while the college continues to function, the possibility of infection in the smaller groups of the classroom.

Then, beside this, there is the fact that many classes are either discontinued or are being carried on by assistants or other substitutes, who, though perfectly capable in their own lines, and willing to undertake the new work thus thrust upon them, cannot quite reach the goal which has been set for the class by the regular leader,—a thing which results in a definite loss of interest on the part of the student. Ye editor's case may be extreme, he admits, but it is nevertheless a fact that he has been privileged to attend just one-half the class hours which he ordinarily would have had since his return early in January-and this exclusive of the cuts each making several good stops. which sickness have made necessary. In such cases it seems that the danger of contagion rather outweighs the value to be abstracted from college attendance. from college attendance.

In any case where the closing of the college is advocated there is always the serious question of what is to become of the student body if the college suddenly closes its doors. Obviously, even if body if the college suddenly closes its doors. Obviously, even if has. be a great amount of unusual expense involved in transporting taken its worst licking from the representing Bates. There are several all the members of the student body could afford it, there would everyone to his respective home and thence back to college when it was again opened. There is the hope, at least, that the cost of sickness will fall on a comparatively small minority, so that from the men will be a big help to the varthe pecuniary standpoint alone, unless one is so unfortunate as to contract the measles and a special nurse in one operation, the majority would register a saving. A sort of pocket your money and take your chance affair, that.

And there is always, too, the consideration that the Class A rating which the College has so recently acquired would have to be given up, unless the present session were prolonged beyond the their Saturday night frolies or the scheduled time into the summer. The loss of rating would undoubtedly prove a hindrance to students wishing to transfer credits, and any prolongation of the session would naturally spoil the present summer plans of many of the professors and members of the student body alike. It would eventually result in the loss of west Point, M. A. C. trip. Leaving in the evening would necessitate an all night ride with the possibility of a present summer plans of many of the professors and members of those concerned.

The real question, then, is whether the present danger of contagion coupled with the shortage of instructors sufficiently outweighs the disadvantages of closing college. Caring little for a classless college, and still less for infection, we are of the opinion that they do.

At some time during the past year, or two years, there appeared in this weekly organ of ours an aricle which set many of us to thinking. The latest of these educational films is called "Varsity" and some interesting stories are told about it. It has been the custom to make these films at the hospitable University of Southern California but lately the tendency has been to vary the scenery. "Varsity" was to have been taken at Yale but the authorities demurred. Princeton was found willing so the story was fitted out with Princeton

Only The Tiger, Princeton's comic magazine, failed to see the joke. The issue of that magazine for last June criticized the administration for turning the campus into a temporary Hollywood.

Several telegrams were secured from alumni. Mr. Struthers Burt '04, called Yale's refusal a "distinct victory for New Haven." "If we are going in for such things," complained Mr. Burt, "why not start nationwide advertising campaigns with such slogans as "Princeton, The Friendly University," or, "You don't know what education is until you've been to Princeton."

The perplexing stickwork and dazzling skating of Johnny Cogan in last Saturday's hockey game against Colby in the Saint Dom Arena, resulted in tieing the game for Bates after the White Mule pucksters had opened a rush in the first period to score two goals, and put the Garnet liant work of the opposing goal-tender. But Cogan was the outstanding star of the day, and he has the distinction of scoring every Bates goal so far in the State series games. The work of Capt. Pooler also stood out in the Colby game. Pooler went down the ice time and time again with clever evasions of the defensemen, and at one instance of the game skated right up to the Colby net, where, however, a deluge of frantic Colby players forced him to the ice before he could game this year. Pat Malia worked well, and Jerry Johnson was almost as fast as Cogan when on the ice. Topolosky, at the goal, made several good stops and showed improvement. "Zeke" Secor was unable to play because of an injured shoulder.

The dash of Colby in the first period took the breath and the hope out of the Bates rooters. The sturdy col-legians from Waterville started off with a temporary rush which swept the Bates defense off its feet, and resulted in two tallies in the opening period. Scott, a few minutes after the starting gong, went down the ice and scored the first point for Colby. The Colby wings were working unusually well during the first frame. Catching Bates unawares, the Colby men took advantage of their jump, and before many more minutes had elapsed, parked the puck inside the Garnet net for the second and final Colby score of the game. Finding themselves pressed beyond expectation, after the triumphant first period, the White Mules started a spirited rally in the beginning of the third period, which, however, simmered down to a weak attempt to be aggressive before many minutes had elapsed. Before the period was half over, Colby was stalling to the accompaniment of unquestionable boos from the crowd. The stalling, however, failed to hold the slight lead for Colby, and the Bates men went deep into Colby territory to hasten the play. Pat Malia gave Colby a scare at one instance, when he got the puck from a Mule forward who was just coming out from behind his own net. Teammates, however, came to his assistance and prevented the puck from being pushed into the net.

But Cogan came through again, despite the stalling, and despite the lateness of the game and its attendant hopelessness. Going down the left lane he evaded the forwards and defensemen in turn, skated up to the net and shot a goal, waist-high, that Irvine had no chance of stopping.

This second Bates score forced the game into overtime, the usual two five-minute periods. These last two short eriods were all Bates, and Colby was times.

Mrs. Induk Kim to Visit Campus

Student Movement Leader Touring Amer. Colleges Here on Jan. 24-25

On campuses around the world, Christian youth are setting themselves to try anew Christ's way of living for themselves and with others. The Student Volunteer Movement is an organization of such students throughout the country who purpose to share in the efforts of these modern missionaries with people around the world.

Mrs. Induk Kim is a representative of this Student Volunteer Movement.
She secured her education in Korea in the face of great difficulties. Only in the face of great difficulties. Only by masquerading as a boy could she attend elementary school, for there was none for girls in her district. Later she attended a Christian girls' high school in Seoul, the Capital of her country. After the best possible training there, she came to this country for her college work, securing her A.B. degree from Georgia Wesleyan.

Mrs. Kim is one of the recognized leaders of the Student Movement in Korea. She is eager to return to teach in her Alma Mater, but before doing so she is visiting some American colleges in order to present the possibil-ities of Christian missionary service. Students on this campus will be glad to learn that she is to visit here Jan. 24 and 25.

Any one desiring to have an interview may make arrangements with Elizabeth Wright, Milliken House.

What Other College Men Have Done With Kresge

"Graduating from Western Reserve University in 1921, I began business life with an idea that I was fitted for mana-gerial work. I left my comfortable desk work and started in the stockroom. Then I worked successively as floor manager, assistant manager, and manager.

He is now a manager of a Kresge store and claims: "Today I find myself receiving a greater income than the teachers and industrial acquaintances who sought to discourage me for making such a radical change of occupation."

A Missouri University graduate enthusiastically relates the following:

"In June of 1923, just after I had been presented with my much treasured sheepskin, a gray haired gentlemen with years of experience said to me: 'Just what the

on the seeds you sow during the next few years. Take my advice and select some good company, begin at the bottom and work your way to the top.'

Today I am managing my first store, happy in the thought that I am on the road to success."

FTER the years of college then there comes A to many men the most trying period of their careers. What place does the world have for them? For what niche has their training best suited them? Where do they fit?

It is to these seniors who have not yet fully decided on their future that this advertisement is addressed.

The S. S. Kresge Company has an opportunity for college men who are ambitious enough and capable enough to reach the top - yet who are willing to start at the bottom. These men we train to be store managers and to occupy other executive positions-well paid positions involving a share in the Kresge profits. The men selected are given intensive preparation for their future executive positions, they are instructed in every detail of store management and they are advanced as rapidly as they become familiar with the Kresge policy and the Kresge methods of merchandising. The work is not easy but the reward is not small-an executive position in the Kresge organization which operates 510 stores with an annual volume of business close to $150,000,000.

If a career such as those described here appeals to you, write our Personnel Department and a Kresge representative will be sent to give you a personal interview.

What Others Have Done You Can Do

A Bucknell College graduate writes

"After graduating from college with the degree of B. S. and M. A. I accepted a position as Chemistry instructor in a small college. After two years as an instructor, I became dissay useled and decided to enter the business world.

I became acquainted with an enthusiastic Kresge manager, who gladly ex-plained their system of training men to become store managers. Shortly after that I started in the stockroom, received promotions according to my ability to earn them, and today although a successful store manager I am in line for still greater responsibilities.

I know of no other organization where a man's efforts will be better repaid than with the Kresge Company."

An alumnus of the University of Michigan class of 1922 says: "The most important problem confronting me the last semester in school was choosing the Job' that would begin when campus days were over. To make the right start in the business world was my ambition. I turned down several soft snap jobs, the kind that paid fairly well to start but held no future, for a stockroom job with the Kresge Company which paid little to start but offered a definite future. I combined my education with good common sense and after applying myself diligently, I was rapidly promoted to greater respon-

Today I am manager of a good sized store, and gladly recommend the Kresge Company as a means to a definite end, providing you possess the necessary qualifications and a whole hearted desire to succeed."
