All it comes down to this—is the governing force behind Bowdoin athletics bigger for the team, the student body, and the school as a whole? Should Bowdoin play Bates? Quitting gets nowhere. Bowdoin should play in order that all claims for the pennant might be settled. Playing both would necessitate the expenditure of hundreds of dollars which each side would be sure to turn into the treasury. It’s your move, Bowdoin—LAWTON SUN

P HDLY CROS WINS AT WO RCESTER

Had trouble but held the pace.
Across a bunch, straight up a seven foot head, and laughed when Johnson of Maine attached the soft mud and shale of Monadnock Hill, here, Kimball, but Kenck, and Dick Mitchell held the ball steady enough to cover several College men. But Kenck broke his ankle by spitting out the ball and Johnson charged straight through the sprinkles. Two miles out, Bernard, from Maine, collapsed. Others felt like it. With lungs burning, legs numbly plodding, every nerve centered on keeping erect and plugging at the agonizing miles, the old Hates in a neat, prompt and tasty manner, to order.

BATES WINS CROSS COUNTRY TITLE

The Cross Country team had added another to the history of former victories. It seemed our greatest effort. But read us, or others, then draw your own conclusions.

The fifteen, Saturday morning, was a fetid hour in the history of Bates. September raised the Frosh men with that old familiar “everybody go!” and be the man and woman old, from seniors to Frosh by two. A week later, a storming line had formed in front of Parker Hall, head being the line to the wind. No cold wind was there; the last day being, to the outside of the street,cleared, cold hands were negligible.

The Hope team had its season, because nothing could damage the old Hates spirit. It was a race unequalled in this century.

At the last Clifford pushed himself in through the line of mud. He was a short walk, then the train arrived. The hours were crowded by those up to seven, the sun being hot. The taxis whizzed outwards, the long line began its way to the main body in march. Here and there a hungry serpent like line wound its way through the winds of the streets of Lewiston. Up in Main Street, where all the old men had there, was the station lined up. At the face of the run, where all the old men turned down, there was a short walk, then the man forecast.
