If you ask any college freshman of today why he is entering on his course he will either tell you, shamming as he expects to allow some to take his surplus salary for his services when his university student, or he will become as idealistic as the junior of the college species and rant about something which he styles "world service." In either case there will appear a constant discussion, the question of munificent provision for the service rendered. For that matter, even the Savior of Man felt sure that the world would supply him with the necessary material to make the man He did not. But he accomplished so much in the terms of world service there is a least a suspicion that he has really thought a little about what form his money-making ought to take so that he may be an honest mediocrity. It is at least safe to assume that he has tried to determine and perhaps to cultivate his own peculiar capabilities.

There are then, two chief types with which the college must deal. The first are the mind-controlled and the minds idealized. Both are striving toward goals so slightly separated in reality that no differentiation is possible, but the two classes choose entirely different routes and points of attack.

The dangers to which these groups are subject are nearly balanced. For the "money" class there is always an danger of entire forgetfulness of every other consideration, the gradual transformation of a man into a money-bag, important only while well filled. There is little reed, on the other hand, to worry about the awakening of the idealists. The latter are striving toward goals so slightly separated in reality that no differentiation is possible, but the two classes choose entirely different routes and points of attack.

Bernard Set for Mar. 15

The first and most lasting impression in Executive Positions

JUST what the future holds for you will depend largely on the needs you sow during the first few years after your college days are over. Some men will follow the easy path, the line of least resistance. They will select the soft snap jobs, the kind that pay fairly well now but hold no future. Others will be willing to begin at the bottom and work their way to the top. These are the men who will be tomorrow's leaders in every field of endeavor.

If you are of this energetic type, the Kresge Company offers you a future rich in opportunity. We will train you to manage our stores. You will be started on the lowest rung of the ladder.
You will be gradually advanced until you are thoroughly trained in every phase of store management. Then you will be given a store managership and a share of the profits.

Write to our Personnel Department today and we will arrange an interview with a graduate of your own college who has already found success in the Kresge organization.
