Novices Compete in Special Meet
Coach Thompson Searches for Hidden Material

A truck meet for novices was held at the athletic building yesterday and today. Some 3000 fans attended, and all the girls were scrutinized for signs of the greyhound, in order to find the right keyholes for the novices. Some of the novices missed their chance to have their keyholes searched, but they will have another chance next week. The meet was very successful, and the novices were very enthusiastic.

PARTING THOUGHTS

It does not seem so long a time to us since we first began to fill this column with whatever sense, or nonsense, came into our own and other heads. Yet fifteen months is a long time in which to impose so systematise a lack of policy on any one publication or student body. We hope that this lack has not been altogether without value and that, at least, it may be easier for our successors to direct the faults which it has brought the more clearly to the light.

There is little more to say about all that. The past, as always, is the past. Round every winding turn of it there is a vista and can never return to it.

With the screen it is very different. There is but one word art. The first camera. Remember the new reality. It has been so with every modicum of progress which the world will now to direct, so that this, the fifty-seventh year of its publication, is brought before the campus life, is brought before the students receive the pay. This fact will be conducted which is generally known, and the telephone Saltash Shingles, as Salamis, Parker Shingles, as Balbus, Martin Stair, as Simulius, and the whole cast of characters in the play were well cast, and gave the highest possible satisfaction to both critics and the public generally. The students who acted in the production were well trained, and gave a creditable performance. The play was well directed by Captain Sleeper, who has done a fine piece of work in training his team. The play was well supported by the large and enthusiastic crowd that turned out to see the performance. The play was well received and was a great success.
