FACULTY THESPIANS THRILL WITH TERRIFIC, TRAGIC TROPE

Brilliant Tragedy by Miss Roberts and Dr. Purinton
Wins Applause of Critics. Stewd Aunt Reporter
Criticizes World’s Premiere and Dermiere

(Lois, Dec. 4022)

Breaking all precedent, the faculty play was presented upon the last day of the six-week winter term. Stewd Aunt Reporter criticizes this rare appearance of the faculty play, saying that Miss Roberts and Dr. Purinton’s "Mallets' Cray" do worthy service in this direction. The presentation was the first of its kind in the college, and the production was a success, according to the applause of the audience.

Delay Team is Now Working Under Snowshoe Thompson

The first snowshoe expedition of the season was staged yesterday, December 17, at the college. The team, consisting of ten faculty members, is working under the supervision of Snowshoe Thompson, who has been appointed as the expedition’s leader. The team is expected to return next week with a report on the progress of their work.

Bimby O. 's Brave in First Round

In a sudden dramatic scene, "Boy's" Bimby O. rushed into the ring and stung his opponent, causing him to retreat. Bimby's quick and powerful style surprised his opponent, who failed to match him. The fight ended in a technical knockout, with Bimby emerging victorious.

World is Thrown Into Paroxysms as Epoch Making Ukase Issues from Loustons. Thousands Sends Congratulations

A proclamation definitely deciding an issue which has been hanging in the balance for the past six months, was made Thursday evening in the form of a speech by Dr. James B. Fordham, President of Bates College, to the assembled students. The issue is the elevation of a new head. Dr. Fordham's speech was received with enthusiasm by the students, who looked forward to the inauguration of the new head on January 1, 1929.

Sensational Short

Sensational Short, with its owner, Miss B. H. M. Smith, playing the star role, was presented at the college theater last night. The short was praised for its unique plot and breathtaking cinematography. The audience was captivated by the performance of Miss Smith, who was praised for her natural acting skills.

But unknown to the audience, Miss Smith was secretly involved in a dangerous plot. She was working with a group of criminals who planned to rob a local bank. The short ends with Miss Smith being captured by the police, leaving the audience in suspense for the next installment.

You have no doubt heard, dear Reader (and others of the saying of Plato and Aristotle), that all that glitters is not gold.

The New York Times, July 20, 1898

ANON! ANON! ANON!

Once upon a time there lived in a beautiful castle in a fair city a princess who was very wise and good, and who loved her people. She had a heart of gold.

The princess was very kind to all, and she was loved by everyone. But one day, a wicked sorcerer cast a spell on the princess, and she was transformed into a cinder block.

The people were very sad, and they searched for a way to save the princess. They asked the sorcerer for help, but he only laughed and said, "Only true love can break the spell.

The people searched far and wide for someone who could break the spell. They searched for a prince, a shepherd, a farmer, anyone who could love the princess with all their heart.

Finally, a poor shepherd came to the castle, and he said, "I will try.

The shepherd took the princess' hand and led her away. He showed her kindness and care, and she began to recover. After many long years, the spell was broken, and the princess was once again the beautiful and kind young lady she had been before.

The people were overjoyed, and they celebrated for many days. The shepherd was made king, and the princess was his queen.

The end.

Enjoyment of Being Serious

Among the other campus functionaries, the Secretary of the Faculty, Mr. John Brown, was the only one of the officials present who seemed to enjoy the performance. He appeared to be in the best of spirits, and was quite enthusiastic about the performance.

The lighting was admirable, and could see the students' clothes as clearly as if they were in daylight. There was a great deal of applause, and the audience seemed to enjoy the performance very much.

Round Tabler

Enjoy a Very Quiet Evening

The old Bates round table was again in action last night, for a number of the faculty and students met there to enjoy the performance. The room was filled with people, and the atmosphere was very pleasant.

No Arrests are Made at Bazaar

Stewed Aunt Reporter Sees No Stewed Aunts

Tio

Dinner was served to a hungry mob of men at the Bates Commons Friday evening. For the past few years the dinner has been given as a Christmas treat for those willing to brave the ice cold and snow storm of last week. The dinner was served promptly at the usual hour. The menu consisted of several courses. The first course was a soup of vegetables and meat. The second course consisted of beef and potatoes. The third course was a roasted bird with vegetables. The fourth course was a dessert of cake and ice cream. The dinner was enjoyed by all who attended.

WHO'S WHO AT BATES

In an exclusive interview with a student reporter, Dr. Robert Mac Donald, professor of Latin, made the following statement: "I merely wish to make it clear that in my opinion the place of women in any university depends on their ability and character. I do not wish to be considered a misogynist."

The Greek dinner of the seven walls by the C.O. was quite successful and the College of Women conducted an excellent parade on the theme "Booths for Evergreen." The parade was well attended and the Greek booths were large and interesting. The parade was led by the Athena, a large woman with a wreath on her head, and the Athenian, a man with a cup in his hand. The parade was accompanied by a band of music.

Club Activities

Men's Puck-Ticks Stability: Major Batey of Newburyport and Major Bane of Lynn debated on the relative political significance of games and sports in the life of the male student. The debate was held in the Salle de Sports and was well attended. Both sides presented strong arguments.

Avery, one of the most successful clubs at Bates, held its annual ball on Saturday evening. The guests included a number of prominent Batesmen and women. The dance was well attended and the food was excellent.

Over the Back Fence

It would be difficult to reveal the secrets of such an affair as this paper has turned out to be. It is certainly an appeal to the intellectual. We feel that the affairs of this issue, though not necessarily important, have rather failed in not appealing to your better natures, though they may surprise the public at least of the more serious and thoughtful food for six hundred.

BIBBY K. M. BRAY'S DIXIE

A few weeks ago, the College was the scene of a very successful affair known as the "Dixie." The affair was held in the Salle de Sports and was well attended. The guests included a number of prominent Batesmen and women. The dance was well attended and the food was excellent.
