Bates students and faculty as well as the townspeople were shocked when they learned of the death of Frances Carroll on November 22. She was found dead in the bathroom of her dormitory room. Her parents, who had been out during the evening, entered the tub to find her. They had lighted a small gas heater to heat the bathroom and had turned on the water, but had not entered the tub. Death was pronounced due to either suffocation or carbon monoxide gas poisoning of undetermined cause. An investigation is being made by the Lewiston fire department.

Populist with Camphusters

Frances was well liked by her classmates and had a very pleasant personality. She was born March 12, 1910, and was graduated from Yarmouth High School. She had a part in the class play, was a prominent member of the debating team, had an honor seat at the graduation exercises and was fourth in the class, was on the staff of the Bates literary magazine, was a prominent member of the Social Science Society and a member of the Students' Council. She was also a member of the Bates Women's Club and the Bates Social Scientists.

In spite of the fact that the customary Saturday night dance would interfere, the debate committee decided to hold the debate season opening meeting at Bates this year, the meeting was postponed at the convention for next year. The debate committee would like to extend their hearty congratulations to the Bates College debate team for their victory at the convention.

The following resolution relating to the Bates Women's Club was passed during the convention:

The Resolution

"It is recommended that the social committee should have a new college term."

Carnegie and Urquhart

THE WEEK IN CHAPEL

by ELLEN DURST

"Two men went into a temple to pray. One of them, a Pharisee, thanked God that he was not like the other man, who was a tax collector. The other man, a publican, said that he was sorry for his sins and asked God to have mercy on him. The first man thought that he was better than the other because he did not sin. The second man knew that he was a sinner and asked for forgiveness. The first man did not forgive himself, but the second man did.
