Social Student Convention
The annual convention of the Social Student Association was held during the recent holiday. Several resolutions were passed, one of which reads: "The minds of a majority of the student body are controlled by the activities of the Social Student Association. We believe that our interests are best served by a student association that promotes wholesome recreation, and that this student association is the Social Student Association."

Minstrel Show
The annual minstrel show sponsored by the Student's Association was held last week. The program included singing, dancing, and comedy, with a variety of characters in blackface. The audience had a good time, and the show was well received.

The Wagon And the Star

The road which one takes can be a source of inspiration to writers. In this issue, we have two articles that capture the essence of travel and its impact on people's lives. The first article, "The Wagon And the Star," explores the journey of a young man who leaves his small town to pursue his dreams in the big city. The second article, "The Star of the West," tells the story of a starry-eyed dreamer who embarks on a journey of self-discovery.

The Student's Association and the Social Student Convention, both of which focus on the needs and interests of students, have met to discuss various issues. The Student's Association has proposed a resolution that would allow students to have a say in the running of the school, while the Social Student Convention has called for greater diversity in the selection of speakers for campus events.
