Japanese Advances

Douglas Fairbanks, the popular actor, will star in a new film, "Farewell," which is scheduled for release this fall. The film is based on a play by George Bernard Shaw, and will be directed by Alexander Korda.

According to Fairbanks, the role of Lord Protector is one of the most important he has ever undertaken. He has been preparing for months for this role, and has worked closely with the director to ensure a realistic portrayal.

This film marks a new departure for Fairbanks, who has usually played leading men in Technicolor. "Farewell," however, will be shot in black and white, a departure from his usual style.

The film is scheduled to go into production in March, with filming expected to take place in Paris and London. Fairbanks will also travel to Japan to do some of the filming there.

The character of Lord Protector is a complex one, and Fairbanks has taken great care to understand his background and motivations. He has read extensively on the topic and has worked closely with the play's author, George Bernard Shaw, to ensure a faithful adaptation.

In addition to his acting duties, Fairbanks will also be involved in the production side of the film. He has hired a team of experienced technicians to ensure a high-quality final product.

Despite the challenges, Fairbanks is excited about the project and looks forward to working with Korda and the rest of the cast and crew. He is confident that "Farewell" will be a memorable film that will stand as a testament to his acting abilities.

PRAISED BY THOMPSON’S WORK

We knew that fine tobacco we cut GRANGER just like kind of tobacco that grew in the Blue -t*-a tobacco which was suited to pipes. We found out, first, that there was a kind of tobacco that grew in the Blue Grass section of Kentucky called White Ruby. And we have been smoking a pipe since 1913, and that there is a kind of this tobacco which was between the tobacco used for cigarettes and the tobacco used for chewing tobacco. It is this kind that is used in our pipes.

We found out that Mr. J. W. Wellman, many years ago, made a pipe tobacco which was very popular. But it was never advertised and after he passed away nothing more was heard about it. We acquired this Wellman Method and that is what we use in making Granger.

Next was the cut. We knew that fine tobacco burnt hot because it burnt so fast. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times. So we developed a tobacco which burnt hot because it burnt so fast. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times.

We started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. And we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on.
