CO-EDUCATIONAL DINING

To many people, the suggestion of eating in a co-educational dining hall is nothing but a stumbling block. To the modern college student who is used to the individuality and privacy of separate dormitories, the idea of being forced to share such a function with members of the opposite sex is anathema. Many students have expressed their misgivings about the proposed plan, and some have said that they will not eat in the dormitories around the campus, and the proximity of the dining hall is one of the main reasons why they oppose it.

The fact is, however, that most students are not against the idea of co-educational dining; they simply oppose the idea of being forced to eat in a co-educational setting. The idea of being able to eat with friends of the opposite sex is not anathema to everyone, and many students have said that they would be willing to try it if it were offered as an option.

Many students have also said that they would be willing to try it if it were offered as a new dormitory option, rather than being forced to eat in a co-educational setting. The idea of being able to eat with friends of the opposite sex is not anathema to everyone, and many students have said that they would be willing to try it if it were offered as an option.

Remember When Tuition Was $36, Room $12, Board $76?

In those days of frugal campus living, at an institution which, in spite of its comparatively small endowment, had already achieved, by means of a frugal and American college, to be able to look back to the days when the corn grew on the ground and everything was cheap, to be able to remember the days when the corn grew on the ground, and everything was cheap. As the college grew older, its students began to realize what it meant to be educated, what it meant to be a part of the college, what it meant to have the interests of the college at heart. They began to realize that the college was more than just a place to study, that it was a community, a place where they could grow intellectually and morally.

Dutiful bases, but it was an attempt to establish industrial democracy by the province, the state, and the community of the people. This attempt has not been successful.

He quoted the statistics that Russia is growing through at present, the number of factories, the number of workers, the number of products, the number of engineers, the number of scientists. The progress has been amazing.

He then wrote of the fact that the peasants have hindered it. The war for bread is still going on. He told of receiving a letter from a peasant in Russia who wrote of not having bread in months. All are serious of being educated.

A membership of eighty. Deming, a member of the board, opened the meeting with a speech of welcome.

The meeting then proceeded to business, with the following members present:

Richard C. Bradley, A. M., Professor of Chemistry, and President.

The meeting then adjourned to the next meeting.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the presentation of the famous "A Goodly Heritage" by students and Commencement Day. It was followed by a reception at the college.

Alabama ACES at Commencement Hop

The Alabama Aces were entertained by a group of students at a hop at the college.

The Aces were furnished by the college book store. Books, post cards, and other gifts were given to the Aces.

The Aces presented their plans for the future, and it was decided to have a hop at the college.

Luncheon

At the Proper place.

Lunch is the first meal of the day, and it is important to eat well in order to have energy for the rest of the day. It is important to eat a balanced meal, with a variety of foods, in order to get all the necessary nutrients. It is also important to eat slowly, to allow the body to digest the food properly.

Some things you can Prove... Like the Milder, Better Taste of Chesterfields

JUST trying a package or two will show you that Chesterfields are Milder and Better-Tasting. But you can't learn much about why they're that way—except by taking our word for it.

The reverse is the story of most cigarettes. You'll find them on sale, you will find our buyers, busy picking out and purchasing, rips, mild tobaccos—almost good enough to eat.

Then they are blended and cross-bred—determined—Crossbred and Turkish—just the right proportion... for there will be just one good flavor and aroma.
