A New Deal

"The best is yet to come," Mr. Harold, the President, said in his inauguration address, "and it is our duty to prepare for the best. The American people have shown us the way to work together, to overcome our difficulties, to achieve a new deal of freedom and prosperity for all."

The Government has decided to enact a series of new measures to benefit the people. Among them are:

1. The establishment of a national health insurance program to provide medical care for all Americans.
2. The expansion of the Social Security system to include unemployment and old age benefits.
3. The creation of a new agency, the National Recovery Administration (NRA), to regulate prices and wages in industries and to promote fair competition.
4. The implementation of a public works program to create jobs and stimulate economic recovery.
5. The reform of the banking system to ensure financial stability and public confidence.
6. The passage of a law to guarantee workers' rights to organize and to engage in collective bargaining with employers.
7. The establishment of a national public works administration to coordinate federal assistance for local public works projects.
8. The creation of a new agency, the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB), to protect the rights of workers and to promote fair labor practices.
9. The enactment of a law to provide for federal aid to education and to support the arts and the sciences.
10. The establishment of a national economic council to advise the President on economic policies and to ensure economic stability.

These measures are aimed at achieving a new deal of freedom and prosperity for all Americans. Together, we can build a nation that is free from fear and want, a nation that is rich in opportunity and justice for all.

It is a time of great hope and of great challenge. Together, we can make this a nation for all Americans. Together, we can build a new deal of freedom and prosperity for all.

The Government is committed to the people, and we will work tirelessly to ensure that they have the chance to rebuild their lives and to live in dignity and peace. Together, we can build a new deal of freedom and prosperity for all.

SPORTS COMMENTS

BY ROY SAUNDERS

After winter sports had been suspended for a while last Thursday, we were relieved of our annual ordeal of weekly Damiano sanatorium. Winter sports are only a few weeks away, however, and so some experience of the same sort will be required. Therefore, it was pleasant to get our first glimpse of a new season on Saturday night when the Garnet players were pitted against the better class of Colby players.

The first Garnet home game this season was a 4-2 victory over Bates. The game was played in the new Alumni Arena and was the first time that the arena has been used for a home game. The game was quite exciting, with the Garnet players putting up a good fight against the Bates players. The Garnet players were able to score four goals, while the Bates players were able to score only two.
