Two Sides To This Story

Moni Sen, a post-graduate student from St. Stephen's College, New Delhi, India, here last week under the auspices of the World Student Christian Federation, observed that American college students seem to him, to be more interested in having a good time, and in seeking thrills than in studying current affairs.

Mr. Sen's remarks, suggested as a contribution toward the understanding of each other's problems, are based on his observation of classes and of students in 50 college campuses in a cross-country tour. They are, as he told typical conclusions of visitors to the United States.

If typical, they are worthy of the consideration of students involved in the serious academic activities.

Mr. Sen feels that students in this country are deprived of the opportunity to develop their latent potentialities.
