New York Reporter Explains Santa Claus
Is There a Santa Claus?

Annually at Christmas time, many newspapers report the following: "Is there a Santa Claus?" And the response is: "Yes, Santa Claus is real." Yet, when you ask Santa Claus, "Is there a Santa Claus?" he will say: "Yes, Santa Claus is real." But who cares? That's the point. The question is not whether Santa Claus exists, but the need for the idea of Santa Claus.

In the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as if there were no world. There would be no joy, no happiness, no love, no happiness. People would not be able to make tangible the idealistic existence. They would have no hope except in sense and sight. The whole world would be filled with uncertainties and confusion.

Belief in Santa Claus is important because it represents the idea of a higher power. It is an idea that gives hope to those who are in despair. It is an idea that gives comfort to those who are in pain. It is an idea that gives joy to those who are in sorrow.

Santa Claus is a symbol of the love and generosity of the human spirit. He is a symbol of the idealistic existence. He is a symbol of the hope that can be found in the world.

Is There a Santa Claus?

No, there isn't a Santa Claus. There is only Santa Claus.

But that's okay. Because Santa Claus is real. And he lives forever. A name that's been used for thousands of years. A name that's been written into the history of the world. A name that's been sung in the songs of the people.
