Coeds Observe Health Week

All-College Slate, Lectures, Skit Make Annual Event for Women

Once again, the results are coming in on the annual (student) health week. For the past few days, messages have been sent out on campus calling for participation in various activities. The purpose of the week is to enable students and the administration to see how many students are, indeed, taking part and how much improvement is needed. Each year the number of students attending the health week grows and this year is no exception. In the past, the health week has included talks by various doctors and nurses on different health problems and also a health fair where students could get information and assistance with health problems. However, this year's health week has been expanded to include more activities and a greater focus on preventive care.

From the reports received, it appears that students are becoming more aware of the importance of maintaining good health. This is reflected in the number of students who have participated in the various activities. The health week is an important opportunity for students to learn about health and make changes in their lives that will improve their overall well-being.

The Health Advisory Committee, which is made up of students and faculty members, has been working hard to plan and organize the activities for this year's health week. They have put a lot of effort into making sure that the activities are informative and enjoyable for students.

In addition to the health week, the Health Advisory Committee has also been working on creating a long-term plan for improving health on campus. They are looking into ways to increase access to health services, such as nurse practitioners and other health professionals, and to make sure that students have the resources they need to maintain good health.

Overall, the health week has been a success and the Health Advisory Committee is looking forward to continuing to work on improving health on campus. They are committed to making sure that students have the tools they need to lead healthy, fulfilling lives.
De Capo --

With the end of the first week of classes after spring vacation, the fact that the spirit of campus leadership has been created becomes increasingly evident. The various clubs have set their new presidents in action, the General Assembly has been conducted under the leadership of a new Step Club, and a new staff has been issued by the Students of Bates College.

Two beliefs are born in this period of transition—two beliefs that must in one general truth. The retiring order knows that the new order will not in its spirit, as well as in its past last year, any order that knows that it will do work twice as well as it was ever done before—both of these are wrong.

This game of being under pressure involves a number of organizations—or teams—that captains are mostly seniors. Jane auxilliary captains become investigate (through graduation, train is called, new captains are chosen, and the game goes on. We'll make our moves, we'll perform our singing acts, and we'll have our own style of play. Now let's get out of this hurdle of planning and take up the game again!

UnSecret Codes

Secrecy, intentional or not, is one of the prime factors for suppression or of a feeling of security. In our four years of college, the student has the help of the General Assembly, the executive departments, the faculty and the students to help him. For his part, the student must not make mistakes, and the help he gets is of no value if he does not use it wisely.

The STuDIoF has also a policy—presented in its Code of Ethics. This Code, hidden by "secretary" hereafter, is presented in a brief part:

1. To be accurate as to facts, promptly and effectively correct any errors that may occur.

2. To purify news, thus eliminating purely personal comment about staffs, editors and people.

3. To avoid material which is a defamatory or pejorative.

4. To make all criticism dignified and constructive in purpose if not possible.

5. To withhold any errors that may occur.

6. Within limitations, there should be entire freedom. That's the wish on part of the faculty or the administration to the students.
