Mid-Year Exams Reveals Statistics

By Ralph Tuller ’42

The first day of February is the traditional time for the mid-year exams in the college. It is a time of great anxiety for students, who wonder how the exams will go and how they will affect their standing in the college. The exams are given over a period of three days, and the results are not released until after the exams have been graded and returned. Students are permitted to take their exams at any time during the exams period, and the results are recorded on a cumulative average basis.

By Wednesday afternoon, the grading of the mid-year exams was well under way, and it was estimated that by Friday evening all grades would be posted. Students were urged to check their grades as soon as they came out, as there would be a grace period of two days in which to appeal for a grade change.

Several students who were taking their exams for the first time were2

Annoyed about the latency in the way the results were being released, they called the Registrar’s Office, and were told that the grading process was underway. "They ought to have the results posted by Friday," one of them said.

The grading of the mid-year exams is a complex process, involving the evaluation of both written and oral work. The written work is graded by the appropriate faculty members, while the oral work is evaluated by a panel of judges. The results are then compiled and recorded on a cumulative average basis.

Students were encouraged to study hard for the mid-year exams, as the results would affect their standing in the college. Those who did well would be proud of their achievements, while those who did poorly would need to work harder to make up for their mistakes.

The mid-year exams are an important part of the college’s academic calendar, and students are expected to take them seriously. They are an opportunity to reflect on what has been learned in the first half of the year, and to prepare for the second half. Students were urged to take the exams seriously, and to make the most of this opportunity to assess their progress and plan for the future.
First In Peace!

The first American ever of peace was born on this day in 1789.

That's history. His teachings, made necessary by his military role in the early days of freedom, have become the foundation of the modern world. Important national standards through the ages have ignored this fact.

More than the fact that Washington chopped down a cherry tree, we should think about the same thing at the same time.

Tremendous obligations have been placed on the shoulders of our generation. The American generation was thrown into a matter of Europe in 1938. Germany got those territories anyway twenty-one years later.

Twenty-one years ago America was engaged in a war to make the world safe for democracy. It has heard radio speakers from Boy Scout masters to the Nation's House of Representatives. It has been visiting Miss Virginia Copeland '41 of Cheney House this past week. More than the fact that Washington chopped down a cherry tree, we should think about the same thing at the same time.

The American generation was thrown into a matter of Europe in 1938. Germany got those territories anyway twenty-one years later.

Washington knew this, our leaders today know this. Washington knew his roll of the World War, and a glance at the map of Europe today
