Seventy years ago, on the battlefields of France, American young men were fighting for survival and victory. We remember them today, and we honor their courage and sacrifice. May we never forget the lesson of the past and strive for a better future.

Happy VA Day!

Bates Post, May 8, 1945
In reading an announcement for one of our courses during the past week we saw the statement that "we are fast becoming a nation of bluffers and we are weary of having to go through the motions." This, indeed, may be true, but the fact is that we are just as weary of having to go through the motions as we are of being bluffed.

The second part of the statement quoted above is equally true. The writer probably has in mind the fact that the idealistic system of education, as it is known today, has taken many years to develop and is far from perfect. However, in the meantime, the student is expected to participate in activities that he may not be interested in or capable of.

This is where the real problem lies. The student is expected to participate in activities that he may not be interested in or capable of. This is not only unfair, but it is also detrimental to the student's overall development.

It is time that we re evaluate our educational system and make it more realistic. We need a system that is based on the student's individual needs and abilities. Only then will we be able to provide a true education for our students.
