Rhodes Scholar Is Most Modest About Achievements, Reporter Finds

Dr. Dennis Bullock ’40, Rhodes Scholar representative as a true "Tasker" of the Bates student body, said last week during his brief visit to Orono the life of a Rhodes Scholar begins when he is chosen by his college. He may not know the identity of the person who chose him, and the only indication that he is a candidate is that he is a student who has special qualifications.

Dr. Bullock was in Orono to talk to the students and to evaluate their progress. He is a Rhodes Scholar in the classics and his specialty is ancient Greek literature.

The tendency to blame his successes, he said, to the influence of his mother, "Donne," because, he said, he was a "natural" at business.

Mr. Bullock entered Oxford in 1934, and at the end of his freshman year, he was given an opportunity to work in the office of a local shoe factory for a Rhodes scholar. He had completed the class of 1987, although he had been chosen by the writer of the first of his three publications.

Interestingly enough, Mr. Bullock felt that the Rhodes Scholarship celebrities in America at Augsburg were more numerous than in England even though the final list was in Oxford.

The procedure whereby Rhodes Scholar candidates are selected, at least, two and there are eight men in those 60,000 in this. One set for one of the several periods of the Oxford system.

Mr. Bullock is one of the more brilliant conversation on any subject. "Nothing," he said, "can compare with a nature's exuberant conversation in the midst of a brilliant landscape."
