Justify Principles Of Constitution

Amendments of the annual Constitution that are ALL CURRENT THIS week from Bowdoin, Harvard, and the Howard University, are considered especially important.

Important Roles

They are being considered by political scientists in the Constitutional Law classes.

Rutledge, assistant professor of political science at the University of Pennsylvania, said the Center for Constitutional Law would be important.

The 267th Day of the War. . .

A year and two days ago, the United States was plunged suddenly into a war for which it was unprepared. Of this tremendous leap into the midst of the hardship and privation that have come not only to soldiers and sailors but to the civilian population as well, we are becoming more and more conscious.

Most college students, here and elsewhere, are beginning to appreciate the use of college facilities necessary to meet their needs before them. There is no reason for anyone to create the artificial shortages that the war has had Bates here for it has already been undertaken in a feature story elsewhere in the paper.

But out of theswirling vortex of the efforts on the campuses and college people, come some questions that loom above all others. Do you know what this war is about? Do you know what this nation is and for what you will be fighting? How many of you, if suddenly confronted by an inscrutable newspaper or radio or movie or comic strip, could answer these questions accurately and completely? How may you have an understanding of the basic causes of the war?

It is fairly evident that a large majority of the men and women of this college and others are really ignorant of the fundamental problems of this, the greatest war in all times. This would not be so vital a matter if the war were only a month or two old. But when, after twelve months of global fighting, after voluminous literature in book and periodical form, the majority of the men and women to whom the country is supposed to be looking for future leaders, are still unaware of the real issues at stake, then there is cause for serious concern. The colleges in times like this should be looking to far more than just training of specialists in vital war fields. They should be able to search out and disseminate the knowledge of what this war is about, and attempt to show how subsequent events and issues will be affected. If the colleges can fill both of these needs, there is need for readjustment, not only in subject matter but of educational policy as well.

Do you believe that this is a war of liberation, not only for the conquered peoples of Europe but of all the oppressed individuals the world over? Do you believe that this is another struggle "to save the world for democracy"? What is your conception of democracy, and do you really enjoy that form of government in the United States? Do you believe it democratic for college students, even in such a so-called war for freedom, to favor measures such as the poll-tax and others which serve to sharpen class and racial differentiation and privilege?

Such questions are only samples of those that are really pertinent at this time. It is true that no matter how much reading and studying you do on them, they still can be answered in degree only. However, even if the time never comes when you feel you can answer these questions and are conversant with the real issues and stakes of this war, your obligation is to try to find the answer and for you to begin the study of the issues and the factors which have made an obligation, but it is also sensible, for it is a truism that you must be qualified to ask intelligent questions in the face of intelligent answers.

Sean's decision seems accepted by the players after the fact. The boys have been on a roller-coaster ride ever since the team's first season. However, the boys are now ready to carry on. More than three score have been made.

Chief Howarth, lantern, and his teammates were the ones on the coed side of the school. Among the backetball players, the two high schools of the intermediate division are eligible to the senior division competition. If there are enough candidates out for a junior varsity team may be formed. There are as yet unacquainted with the competition, which this year is to be run on the same lines as the first annual Dartmouth Winter Sports Tournament at Hanover.
