Faculty Members Return To Posts

The new semester will bring back to Bates two former members of the faculty who were on leave of absence, and will also add to the staff three local townspeople as part-time instructors.

Raymond L. Kendall who recently obtained his honorable discharge from the Navy will take over his former position as associate professor of Educational Practice. Mr. Kendall is a graduate of Bates, class of 1929. In 1932 he began his teaching career here, and from 1937 to 1942 he was director of the summer session. He entered the Navy in February of 1943, and after being stationed at Newport, R. I., and Memphis, Tenn., saw action in the Pacific. At present he is doing graduate work at Columbia University in New York.

The other former faculty member, who will once more return his profession in Dr. Paul R. Sweet. He received his A.D. at DePauw, and his Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin. He has studied extensively in Gottingen and Munich, in Germany, and in the States in Chicago and Wisconsin. His duties during the war have been with the Office of Strategic Services.

Bates-On-The-Air

Next week Bates-on-the-Air will present a program commemorating the life of William Lincoln. Prof. Charles H. Sampson will give a talk. He has spent many hours studying the life of Lincoln. A musical program, representing the musical organizations on the campus, was the feature of the Bates-on-the-Air broadcast held February 5 over WCOU at 10:15. The choir, Orpheus Society, and Macfarlane Musical Clubs were represented. Miss Jo Williams from the choir sang a soprano solo. A trio from the orchestra, made up of Miss Jean Mather, cellist, Miss Betty East, violin, and Miss Jean Thompson, played the "Angel Serenade." Representing the Macfarlane Club was Miss Jean Harrington, who also took part in the program. A female group, Miss Edith Routier and Miss Marion Dodge, presented the Macfarlane Club's annual show. The program was Miss Jean Harrington's idea, and was given with a number on the accordion played by Miss Marion Dodge.

Dialogue Of W.S. and L.S.

By Dr. Edwin M. Wright

Let's eavesdrop on a conversation. The disputants are two: W.S. and L.S., who, if they were a drama team, would be known as Shakespeare and Schaeffer.

L.S.: Well, William, was our play as you like it?
W.S.: Yes — and no. Understand, I didn't name the play "As I Like It", but "As You Like It".
L.S.: Your audience evidently liked it; if the players hadn't like it, they never could have acted so much gusto. What's in a name? It all depends. But your modern way of doing things!
W.S.: Perhaps, when I have thought it all over, in my day women weren't allowed to take part in stage shows. A female group, Miss Edith Orlando! No doubt I'm inconsistent, but I accepted piped-voiced boys as Rosalind and Andros. As for the clowns, we wouldn't have dared to make such fools of women. Think of my Ann as a William or a Touchstone. It takes a deal of doing to adjust oneself to seeing lovely ladies stope to such folly.
L.S.: Who was it said, "All the world's a stage?" The difference is this: today the women also have their entrances and their exits. I'll steal my Jacques and say that you raw in your time. No boy could have equalled the rare charm of my Rosalind. I'll bet you another thing.
W.S.: And what's that?
L.S.: My girls could wear the costumes and house with more grace than your screwy boys.

Revolver Rattles Replaces
Graduating President

Because of the graduation of both the president and vice-president of the Student Council election has been held to fill these two offices. Joseph Larochelle will replace David Brigham as head of the men's organization while Henry Inouye will take over the office of vice-president left vacant by the graduation of Alden Sears.

Bobcat Claws Fell Bowdoin
Polar Bear In Fight To End

Yes, the claws and Bear clawed last Saturday night at the Bates Gym. In a hard fought game Bates nipped Bowdoin, 58-59, in an exciting state series game.

Glen Floeinger's two pointer with a minute and a half left to play decided the issue. The two teams battled on even terms all the way until Shure broke the 47-47 deadlock. At half time, it was tied 35-35, Bates.

Guy Sandlini and Floeinger loaded the hoop with 21 and 17 points respectively. Pucky McPharlin, Bowdoin ace, scored 20 points for the clawed Bears.

Bowdoin's Jaynes edged the Bates seconds 24-22 in the prelim. Albie-Sparks and Fred Jensen broke the hoop with 11 and 10 points respectively. All is progressing with each game.

Prof. Crafts Prepares
Varied Program Of Song And Dance For Feb. 15

Postponed during the war years, the annual formal pop concert and dance will be presented once more in the Alumni Gym on February 15th at eight o'clock by the music clubs of the college. Tables will be placed at the floor in cabaret style. The college orchestra will play various numbers from 8-9:30. Then there will be a dance from 9:30 when the music clubs will present a floor show, after which dancing will be resumed till 11.

This has always been the prominent social event of the season. Following the Boston Pops concerts given at Symphony Hall in Boston, and getting its name from the old-time pop in soda bottles, the first complete concert was given here in 1927. In the next years specialty numbers were added and the affair was eagerly looked forward to (the last concert in 1942, the theme of the program was gypsy, featuring Italian and Spanish folk and dance tunes, with the performers all appropriately costumed. Originated by Mr. Rowe, the affair was subsequently taken over by the music clubs under the direction of Professor Crafts.

Dr. Zerby Greets
Alumni In Chicago

Doctor Raymond L. Zerby, head of the Religion and Philosophy department, has returned from Chicago where he attended the "Workshop on Christian Education in the Seminary Curriculum" at the Divinity School of the University of Chicago which lasted from Jan. 30 to Feb. 2. The topic of the conference was the study of sources needed in seminary and graduate schools to produce leaders in local churches.

Dr. Zerby officiated at the opening worship service on Jan. 29, and was assigned to the group on "Philosophy of Religious Education." Other groups studied the function of the pastor in Christian education, personnel development, supervision of religious education in local churches, material and resources for Christian education, and the integration of these into the seminary curriculum.

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Zerby met with a special meeting of Bates alumni of Chicago, and was assigned to the group on "Philosophy of Religious Education."

Organism Presents

Novel C. A. Vepers

Mr. Walter Flandorf presented an organ recital at the chapel banquet. March 2, at three p.m. Mr. Flandorf is the dean of the organists in the county of Gloucester and has given many recitals. The audience enjoyed the wonderful music presented by this organist.

Student Government Offers Two Banquets

Simultaneous formal banquets were held last night at Flake Dinner Hall and at the Commons and under the auspices of Student Government. The invitation at Hand was given to all the students in keeping with the theme of the banquet, "Hearts and Flowers," the color motif. A kind of "Eve and Salvation" which he skilfully delivered in a light and humorous vein.

At Banquet, Dr. Andreas Myleus, introduced by vice-president of Stu G., Madeleine Richards, spoke on the subject of "Getting Your Money's Worth," a humorous appeal to the realm of education.

W.S.: What about those that aren't so anyway? L.S.: If you are talking to me, I can certainly say that what you are saying is true.

L.S.: I am not saying anything against you. Just that you might consider the fact that the audience is not always the best judge of talent.

W.S.: That is true. But we can always rely on the critic to give us the truth.

L.S.: Critics are not always the best judges of talent. They may be biased by their own personal preferences.

W.S.: That is true. But the critic can give us an objective view of the performance.

L.S.: The critic can sometimes be wrong. They may allow their own personal preferences to influence their judgment.

W.S.: That is true. But we should always try to consult a variety of critics to get a balanced view of the performance.

L.S.: It is true that the critic can sometimes be wrong. But we should always try to consult a variety of critics to get a balanced view of the performance.

W.S.: That is true. But the critic can still give us an objective view of the performance.

L.S.: It is true that the critic can sometimes be wrong. But we should always try to consult a variety of critics to get a balanced view of the performance.
Captain "Jo-Jo" Sparks
Team To Sweet Victories

If you've seen Bates play basketball, you've seen Jojo Larochelle. Captain and sparkplug, Joe is a major factor in every Bates triumph. Though short and stocky (only 5 ft. 9 in.), Jojo, a guard, is quick and agile and never seems to have to stop for breath. He has had no small part in giving Bates its "short but speedy" reputation.

Saturday night's victory gave Jojo no end of pleasure. Beating Bowdoin in any sport has always been one of the greatest of his ambitions. His happiest memory, he says, is in the football thrashing that Bates gave Bowdoin back in 1941, the first in years. I'll wager that quarterback Joe Larochelle had a goodly share in that victory too.

Jojo isn't a one sport man nor is he an overnight sensation. He has been interested in athletics for years. He played basketball, football, and baseball straight through his high school career in his home town of Methuen, Mass. He became captain of the football and baseball teams in his senior year, playing quarterback in football and shortstop in baseball. Later, at Cushing Academy for a year, Joe also played in all three major sports. He was inducted so soon to Bates for his college education while at Cushing by the principal, Clarence Quimby, our Brooks Quimby's brother. Joe arrived here as a green freshman in October, 1940. No, he hasn't been here ever since! Far from it.

In June, 1941, Joe enlisted in the air corps. Sent to Maxwell Field, Ala., for pre-flight training, he took his preliminary and basic flight courses in the South and finally arrived in Camp Springs, Washington, D. C., in late 1941, ready to try a real fighter after a year and a half's training. In February '42 he was sent to England to join the 8th Air Force. The next four months were the pre-invasion months. Joe's squadron spent them escorting bombers and strafing and dive-bombing German railway and supply targets in France.

Saturday afternoon the first intercollegiate track meet in the Bates cage since the war resulted in a victory for New Englanders over Bowdoin and Bates. Bates entered a weak team and gathered only six points. For Bates the class of '48 came through. Bill Sawyer took a close second in the 400 yard dash and Guy Randell took a close second in the 400 yard dash, thus getting 36% of the 6 points' which Bates picked up.

Larochelle (Continued from page three) has been able to pull the rip cord, if he hadn't landed in the water, and if the wind hadn't kept the chute off him he wouldn't have lived even to be captured by the line of Germans waiting for him on the Channel bank. He was promptly and unceremoniously marched off and less than a month later Joe found himself deep in Germany in the famous concentration camp, Stalag Luft III. Joe has been in Stalag Luft six months and got used to soup and black bread when on a cold day in January the prisoners were told to order to prepare to leave. The Russians were coming. A mid-winter's march through Germany was no pleasure. After ten days the men were loaded into boxcars and shipped to a new camp near Munich. Conditions there were very poor. Without the supply of Red Cross packages that kept coming in, survival would have been difficult.

Then came the good news. Patton was coming. Suddenly on April 29th after eleven months of captivity, it was all over and Joe was free. He didn't waste much time getting back home. By the end of the week he had discharged himself from the hospital and checked in at Bates to complete his work in the Senior House and Senate and to the Chairman of the Committee on Peace-time Conscription.

Through this campaign the Christian Association hopes to bring the problem before the students so that they will resolve their opinions on the subject and to write to their Congressional representatives as to whether they approve or disapprove of the training.
