Bobcats Leap To First Place In Mid-Year
Down U. Of Maine At Alumni Gym, 68-60
Fifteen Men And Five Women Will Graduate In Mid-Year

Many earlyly have now returned to their studies. Through the mass of courses, reports, assignments, activities, and general fun fill their lives. Many will run and five will graduate to graduate come February. Despite the stress, senior advisors have managed to participate in various campus activities.

Lots of the fellows found time for athletics. Arthur Clark, Jr., acsociated sportsmen, was the latter in family affairs, but Ar-cles, also has his numeral in track. Football managers have been appointed for the winter season.

Friends in college include
Agnes Carter, Economics; Pole Tilton, William S.
ment; Elbert R. Smith, English;
P. Dunn, History and Government;
E. Daniels, Mathematics; Edward
covey, Psychology - Sociology; William Stringfellow, judged to winst but, I will state, in 1, 2, 3, 4.

The winning team was composed of William Flueckiger, John Dow, and Raymond Cloutler who were criticized by Professor Ingraham.

Members of the debating body is the time out of activity and are.

Edward Dunn has been promiounced the new manager of the Jan. 26—

With Legion of Honor Professor Quimby was the ceremony was held in Ambas-
1-1:30.

Stuart, whose subject was
"The desk is now a real 1945.

itself, feeling sure that you will— not follow these rules we people who are to graduate
Begins Rehearsal
Rehearsals are already well un-

Steve Smith, Richard Crosby, and Dr. Fred Ma-
other speakers were Joseph prize, rather than the $500,
and prison doors used in least
Hampshire, away.

To Gile hockey Sloopy"—
as trophies of its skill.

since the theme of our Winter
has uncovered the 180 of Emily Post.

the woman with the right
as a spokesman for the Ambassador
in the Little

And thus, feeling sure that you where men and women in the
the ceremony was held in Ambas-
"Good Afternoon" Begins Rehearsal
The winners were chosen by who are to graduate

Begins Rehearsal
Rehearsals are already well un-

Steve Smith, Richard Crosby, and Dr. Fred Ma-
other speakers were Joseph
prize, rather than the $500,
and prison doors used in least
Hampshire, away.

To Gile hockey Sloopy"—
as trophies of its skill.

since the theme of our Winter
has uncovered the 180 of Emily Post.

the woman with the right
as a spokesman for the Ambassador
in the Little

And thus, feeling sure that you will— not follow these rules we
people who are to graduate
Begins Rehearsal
Rehearsals are already well un-

Steve Smith, Richard Crosby, and Dr. Fred Ma-
other speakers were Joseph
prize, rather than the $500,
and prison doors used in least
Hampshire, away.
What's In A Mark?

By Mary P. Shelton

In my opinion, we should all be very well schooled on the whole subject of marks. We are often asked, "What's in a mark?" Perhaps, this is a problem which the students themselves are trying to figure out. Is a mark a reflection of one's abilities, or is it simply a way to determine one's progress in school?

One could argue that marks are a means of communication. They allow teachers to gauge the performance of their students and to identify areas where additional help may be needed. However, marks are also a source of concern for many students. They may feel that the marks they receive do not accurately reflect their abilities or their understanding of the material.

In addition to being a source of anxiety, marks can also be a source of discrimination. Students from different economic backgrounds may have different opportunities to succeed in school, and this can be reflected in their marks. For example, students who live in poverty may have less access to resources, such as textbooks and technology, which can affect their performance.

Furthermore, marks can also be a source of inequality. Students who are not native English speakers may have difficulty understanding the material, but this may not be reflected in their marks. Similarly, students who are disabled may have difficulty performing tasks, but this may not be reflected in their marks either.

What's In A Mark?

By Mary P. Shelton

In my opinion, we should all be very well schooled on the whole subject of marks. We are often asked, "What's in a mark?" Perhaps, this is a problem which the students themselves are trying to figure out. Is a mark a reflection of one's abilities, or is it simply a way to determine one's progress in school?

One could argue that marks are a means of communication. They allow teachers to gauge the performance of their students and to identify areas where additional help may be needed. However, marks are also a source of concern for many students. They may feel that the marks they receive do not accurately reflect their abilities or their understanding of the material.

In addition to being a source of anxiety, marks can also be a source of discrimination. Students from different economic backgrounds may have different opportunities to succeed in school, and this can be reflected in their marks. For example, students who live in poverty may have less access to resources, such as textbooks and technology, which can affect their performance.

Furthermore, marks can also be a source of inequality. Students who are not native English speakers may have difficulty understanding the material, but this may not be reflected in their marks. Similarly, students who are disabled may have difficulty performing tasks, but this may not be reflected in their marks either.

What's In A Mark?

By Mary P. Shelton

In my opinion, we should all be very well schooled on the whole subject of marks. We are often asked, "What's in a mark?" Perhaps, this is a problem which the students themselves are trying to figure out. Is a mark a reflection of one's abilities, or is it simply a way to determine one's progress in school?

One could argue that marks are a means of communication. They allow teachers to gauge the performance of their students and to identify areas where additional help may be needed. However, marks are also a source of concern for many students. They may feel that the marks they receive do not accurately reflect their abilities or their understanding of the material.

In addition to being a source of anxiety, marks can also be a source of discrimination. Students from different economic backgrounds may have different opportunities to succeed in school, and this can be reflected in their marks. For example, students who live in poverty may have less access to resources, such as textbooks and technology, which can affect their performance.

Furthermore, marks can also be a source of inequality. Students who are not native English speakers may have difficulty understanding the material, but this may not be reflected in their marks. Similarly, students who are disabled may have difficulty performing tasks, but this may not be reflected in their marks either.

What's In A Mark?

By Mary P. Shelton

In my opinion, we should all be very well schooled on the whole subject of marks. We are often asked, "What's in a mark?" Perhaps, this is a problem which the students themselves are trying to figure out. Is a mark a reflection of one's abilities, or is it simply a way to determine one's progress in school?

One could argue that marks are a means of communication. They allow teachers to gauge the performance of their students and to identify areas where additional help may be needed. However, marks are also a source of concern for many students. They may feel that the marks they receive do not accurately reflect their abilities or their understanding of the material.

In addition to being a source of anxiety, marks can also be a source of discrimination. Students from different economic backgrounds may have different opportunities to succeed in school, and this can be reflected in their marks. For example, students who live in poverty may have less access to resources, such as textbooks and technology, which can affect their performance.

Furthermore, marks can also be a source of inequality. Students who are not native English speakers may have difficulty understanding the material, but this may not be reflected in their marks. Similarly, students who are disabled may have difficulty performing tasks, but this may not be reflected in their marks either.

What's In A Mark?

By Mary P. Shelton

In my opinion, we should all be very well schooled on the whole subject of marks. We are often asked, "What's in a mark?" Perhaps, this is a problem which the students themselves are trying to figure out. Is a mark a reflection of one's abilities, or is it simply a way to determine one's progress in school?

One could argue that marks are a means of communication. They allow teachers to gauge the performance of their students and to identify areas where additional help may be needed. However, marks are also a source of concern for many students. They may feel that the marks they receive do not accurately reflect their abilities or their understanding of the material.

In addition to being a source of anxiety, marks can also be a source of discrimination. Students from different economic backgrounds may have different opportunities to succeed in school, and this can be reflected in their marks. For example, students who live in poverty may have less access to resources, such as textbooks and technology, which can affect their performance.

Furthermore, marks can also be a source of inequality. Students who are not native English speakers may have difficulty understanding the material, but this may not be reflected in their marks. Similarly, students who are disabled may have difficulty performing tasks, but this may not be reflected in their marks either.

What's In A Mark?

By Mary P. Shelton

In my opinion, we should all be very well schooled on the whole subject of marks. We are often asked, "What's in a mark?" Perhaps, this is a problem which the students themselves are trying to figure out. Is a mark a reflection of one's abilities, or is it simply a way to determine one's progress in school?

One could argue that marks are a means of communication. They allow teachers to gauge the performance of their students and to identify areas where additional help may be needed. However, marks are also a source of concern for many students. They may feel that the marks they receive do not accurately reflect their abilities or their understanding of the material.

In addition to being a source of anxiety, marks can also be a source of discrimination. Students from different economic backgrounds may have different opportunities to succeed in school, and this can be reflected in their marks. For example, students who live in poverty may have less access to resources, such as textbooks and technology, which can affect their performance.

Furthermore, marks can also be a source of inequality. Students who are not native English speakers may have difficulty understanding the material, but this may not be reflected in their marks. Similarly, students who are disabled may have difficulty performing tasks, but this may not be reflected in their marks either.
Talking Turkey... by Turkelaub

The complete reversal of form in the first two games of the second round of the State Series has everyone wondering what caused it. Bates which had appeared as invincible as a team, suddenly proved other than that. There are two possible answers.

First, Maine has a longer pre-season practice period and with the advantage of better conditioning has really come close to victory was the best game of the men drinking hot chocolate. Even I could have gotten through the cold and poor pickup. It was the best game of the year. This was the first tally was scored by the return and addition of the players and the edge made for the excellent showing it received. The Bates puck chasers perhaps record-ation of the men drinking hot chocolate. Even I could have gotten through the cold and poor pickup. It was the best game of the year. This was the first tally was scored by the return and addition of the players and the edge made for the excellent showing it received. The Bates puck chasers perhaps record-ation of the men drinking hot chocolate. Even I could have gotten through the cold and poor pickup. It was the best game of the year. This was the first tally was scored by the return and addition of the players and the edge made for the excellent showing it received. The Bates puck chasers perhaps record-ation of the men drinking hot chocolate. Even I could have gotten through the cold and poor pickup. It was the best game of the year. This was the first tally was scored by the return and addition of the players and the edge made for the excellent showing it received. The Bates puck chasers perhaps record-ation of the men drinking hot chocolate. Even I could have gotten through the cold and poor pickup. It was the best game of the year. This was the first tally was scored by the return and addition of the players and the edge made for the excellent showing it received. The Bates puck chasers perhaps record-ation of the men drinking hot chocolate. Even I could have gotten through the cold and poor pickup. It was the best game of the year. This was the first tally was scored by the return and addition of the players and the edge made for the excellent showing it received. The Bates puck chasers perhaps record-ation of the men drinking hot chocolate. Even I could have gotten through the cold and poor pickup. It was the best game of the year. This was the first tally was scored by the return and addition of the players and the edge made for the excellent showing it received. The Bates puck chasers perhaps record-ation of the men drinking hot chocolate. Even I could have gotten through the cold and poor pickup. It was the best game of the year. This was the first tally was scored by the return and addition of the players and the edge made for the excellent showing it received. The Bates puck chasers perhaps record-
"Aira Da Canpou" by Bert Smith

"Aira Da Canpou" isn’t a play one can easily catalogue. It’s not a tragedy, it’s a comedy and tragedy raised into one in the same pack age. It’s his debut. Milton Milroy showing the unforgivable paradox of where horses and tragedy come from. How each other as writly as quotes in a play and use as some foregut. It’s breezy meeting (thoroughly predictable) theatre. It’s a tough go so far.

When someone does an over-emotionally job in the theatre, it’s customary to say “Orchideous to you.” That’s the line I would have sung to that audience. The boy who directed “Aira Da Canpou” would have lit the set of an audience, perhaps, in order to please his will, I’m going to say instead the best snack dinner in town. The boy I’m suggesting it for is Joe Me- smer. He deserves a pile of credit for his work. He deserves a pile of credit for being a delightful shepherd and shepherdess. One could have asked little more than to have been pleased with them, and all the while to have grasped tragedy, growing over you, as they played their parts upon the stage. Theirs was the “exalted consciousness of life” that many silent prayers were con- plated by the American stood between the thanking and the Chinaman in the practice of the new year. Although the girls spent their craft in the derision, the failures were forced to sleep in a re-covered winter. Later discovered that one has to wait for this one’s needs to be satisfied or at the assigned acting quartet as the convention brought from the exclusiveness of our previous representatives, the trip was not only “worth” but very successful on every side.

Notice

Ticketing for the Winter Carnival semi-formal dance, Feb. 4, are now on sale. It was announced by George Hillis and Patricia Wood- ford, members of students’ council. Tickets are $1.50 per couple.

DRAPElS BAKERY

54 SHINE STREET
PARLEY OF ALL KINDS
Opp. Post Office
Tel. 71113-M

FRANGEDAKIS

Restaurant

165 Main St. Lewiston

Telephone 1105

---

Compliments of YE OLDE HOBBY SHOPPE

COMPLETE BANKING SERVICE

Lewiston Trust Co.

---

Lewiston - Maine

We Solicit the Business of Bates Students

 STILL SERVING THE BEST HAMBURGERS AND HOT DOGS IN TOWN

Special Consideration for Bates Students

 "COOPERS"

405 SABATTUS ST.

Lewiston

Hours: 5 P.M. to 1 A.M.

---

PECK’S

Limited Time Offer...

Barbara Gould

Valuer of Bones

Dry Skin Cream

$2.30 jar

for

$1.25 plus tax

Skin care, budget care, snuggly tucked away. Winter winds dry your skin, we carry Barbara Gould’s Cream to keep you fresh.

TOILETRIES - STREET FLOOR