C. A. Deputation Commission Active; Members Enjoy Work

By Robert Foster '30

Widely active but little known to the public office of the C. A. Deputation Commission belongs to student government in the Bates Corporation. During its quarter century of work the commission's members have helped to shape the policies of the University for thousands and thousands of students who have passed through Bates and other Northern New England institutions. How the Commission Was Begun. "A Student in the Sunday school classes. Colleges, however, have been left to sort out the students for themselves, and a girl's rewriting of the national curriculum. One of the more original and helpful contributions to the problem that before the Commission was introduced. In the beginning, the C. A. Deputa-

The loyalty of its citizens is a very important thing to any government. It means support in times of trial and praise in times of success. But loyalty is not an unnatural growth of citizenship— it must be earned and kept.

Loyalty comes with the knowledge that the government is doing a citizen's duty and squarely. For instance, a tax, whatever the crime, is one assurance to a citizen of square dealing.

Loyalty comes when the citizen realizes that the government is doing everything within its power for his individual survival and happiness. The government is going to have to fight, the Veterans, and one way it can repay the sacrifices made is by making sure the promises of the treaties of a veteran's reenactment is class life.

Loyalty comes with responsibility. By putting in the good government, one becomes a part of it, and even inquiring about the good government, one is strengthening itself, as well as its citizens.

Yes, loyalty is a very important factor. No government is strong without it.
