"Joan Of Lorraine" Set For Dec. 4, 5, 6

We can see to expect on the evening of December 4 and 5 and one of the most unique productions that the Robinson Players have ever attempted. It features a combination of various scenes and characters from the first one hundred years of the production of a finished production.

Maxwell Anderson author "Joan of Lorena," says that has always wanted to write a play about a young woman, because he has wanted an audience in the theater to share the excitement of getting a play on to life for the first time.

In this production the audience will have a chance to see a play in action and watch it grow from its first beginnings to the artistry to the scenes of a finished product.

Thanksgiving — For Man Who Built Bates

By Barbara LeVeque

The student, of course, had to do the work; the instructor could only mark the papers and say, "Well done," or "Well, you've done it again." But, when the real work was done, Mr. D made that big speech of his, and for this reason the students who had been through the course would always say, "I was in Mr. D's class."

In the same way, when the work was done, I said, "I was in Mr. D's class," and I'll always remember the speech he made. It was a big speech, but it wouldn't have been the same without the work that went into it.

As a student, I was very impressed with Mr. D's speeches, and I remember one in particular. It was about the importance of education, and how it could change a person's life. He said, "Education is the key to success, and it's something that every person should strive for." That's why I'm so grateful to Mr. D for giving me the opportunity to learn and grow.

But back to Mr. D's speech. He talked about the importance of hard work, and how it would pay off in the long run. He said, "If you want to succeed, you've got to work hard. And even if you don't, you've still got to work hard. Because the world isn't going to give it to you on a silver platter." That's something I've never forgotten, and it's helped me in my life.

Don't be misled by the 20 points in the box score. The New Hampshire College basketball could hardly be called exciting, although the two teams have plenty of talent... Coach Petro has not had as many victories as he would like this year, and on several evenings was at a disadvantage for the crowd,... and on several evenings was at a disadvantage for the crowd. In fact, there were only two games in which the men had the advantage, both of which were in the final seconds... Coach Petro's team will seek to defend their state of Maine basketball championship, the game will also be the first of the pre-season round of state series matches... A pre-season game with a non-conference opponent would be very desirable and beneficial. However, a check up of schedules... records that none of the four colleges have never won on that court... Last year the men had the advantage at guard. In games generally four men on the varsity team. They are Art Blanchard, Willy Lacy, All Angelosante, and Bill Connor... Our W.C.A. correspondence requests that there will be no fullback chats in the next three Friday nights. Those who want W.C.A. travel credit may receive it for attending the pre-season game... LeMaster Defends Low Church To Canterbury Sunday

Mr. Joseph Losey of the Guion Agency Department will speak to the Bates Sunday Service group on Sunday evening at the Florida homestead church. This is the second of two meetings of the Episcopal Student center at Bates have devoted to various denominations of churchmanship. It is expected that Mr. LeMaster will present the "other side of the question raised by Rev. Robert Stover's talk on November 30 at a Church of the Episcopal Church.

Once again, the meeting will welcome all interested students and faculty members into the discussion.

At the open house for Canterbury Club members last Sunday evening, President Robert P. Proctor announced that preliminary arrangements had been made for a spring conference of Canterbury Club in Northern New England. It was announced, in somewhat of a surprise, that the Rev. Thomas Barrett, Director of the College Division of the Episcopal National Council, will attend the conference.

The meeting at which Mr. LeMaster will speak will begin at 7:30 Sunday, November 30 at 9 South Main Street.
