Club Reflects New Campus Interest in Political Issues - All For Fifty Cents

By William Barlow

Students of government and policy often raise a skeptical eyebrow when they learn that the Politics Club has no one to vote for. In fact, at least one member of the club claims it is the only loosely organized group on campus, and to make matters worse, the club's inactivity has in some instances been interpreted as "an indication of the vivid realization of the contemporary technology and thus reduce the influence of politics on the campus today.

The main purpose of the club is to acquaint the students with the different approaches to political problems, and to discuss the political interaction among the faculty and students. At the club meetings, the students are to be encouraged to bring questions and ideas to the issues discussed.

Another activity of the club is to meet with other groups, such as the Student Senate, to discuss the student body's role in the political process.

For the most interesting new organization was formed last December the Bates College Department of Biology, and Beverage came to take its place beside the politics policies and the Marshall Plan.

Club members are all students and aim to spread word to everyone about the organization.

In the early days of the club's existence, there were often only a few members present at the meetings, but now the club has grown in popularity and membership.

The main advantage of the club is that it provides a forum for the students to discuss political issues, and it encourages the students to become more involved in the political process.

Scribes Talk Shop, Past and Present

By Richard Michaels

The conference got underway on Saturday afternoon in Downey Court, which is reserved for our Bates College community. The conference was organized by the Public Information Committee of the Student Senate. It was attended by about 60 people, who were divided into four different panels.

The following morning the guests gathered in the town hall for the first of three panels.

On the last day of the conference, the panelists addressed a wider audience in the College Union Building. The conference was the first of its kind at Bates.

The next conference, scheduled for the spring of 1949, will focus on the history of Bates and its impact on society.
Intramurals Go Into Final Week

Last Tuesday evening the annual invitational basketball tournament was played out at the Colby gymnasium. After North overpowered all but the Bums, they found the big ball with the Bean Bums' 14 points leading the way. Intercollegiate basketball was played on December 24, 1960.

Roger Howard Produces Point In Track Events

Roger Howard is that tall, husky贝ckett that rises from out of the dregs of the town and hits the last pact mark in the Bates track team. His 6' frame and strapping physique unconsciously makes the job for him easier.

Burns Colby. In the track meets, Colby is an undeniable force. He has a fascinating presence on the field that makes his mark on the track.

The basketball tournament is over, and the Sophomore team captained by Bob Clark chose the year's finals. Runner up and teams placing third and fourth are as follows:

Freshman: captained by "Mac" McKenney; Juniors captained by John Elwell; and the Freshman team captained by "Mickey" McKenney. See you next season.

The grade isn't a grade.

I know this.

Since Coach Pendel will be in a better position to win this, the Sophomore and Varsity teams look forward to a week of spring football practices. The story has been postponed until next season.
