Bastes will have extra free time this ST, though: no final exam week has been scheduled for June. Professors will schedule their own exams during the last week of classes. Kingsbury's pet scheduling idea is to put Short Term in the autumn rather than the spring. "This breaks the kind of trying to put a full semester in between Labor Day and Christmas. It would also let three and four year students graduate at the same time." And, it suggests, "Freshmen might start out with Short Term as an extended orientation. Special freshmen STUs could be a real challenge." "We try to insure that there's enough content in each unit that it will be worth a student's time to take. We improve practically all the instructors' applications, although we sometimes raise questions and make suggestions to the person who has proposed one. And we have to check that there's no overlapping material in the different units," Kingsbury explains.

Vic wants to stress to seniors that they are permitted to take STUs this year even if they've completed all requirements for graduation. Recent notices from the Deans of Students, says Vic, have given some Batesies the impression that they must leave in April.

With most work loads approximately equal — instead of running the gamut from one easy class to two tough ones — Vic feels campus life will become more coordinated. Scheduling will become less rigid. Classes could meet in the evening, or any other convenient time, and not interfere with other classes.

A death seminar and a study of the energy crisis are two of the 60-some-odd subjects planned. "Any problems? Well, I think we'll be happy if we only have enough units to offer," says Robert F. Kingsbury, chairman of the C and C. His committee approved some 42 STUs last year, of which 35 will be taught this April and May. Kingsbury would like to see another 30. C and C has reviewed only one application so far this year, but deadline is not until Jan 18. Many previous Short Term courses will probably be expanded into Short Term Units this year, Kingsbury believes.

Meanwhile, the C and C Committee is pondering several improbable projects for the far future.

"Reading week is a topic that will be under consideration for awhile," says Kingsbury. "The hangup is the high pace at which we operate. A good reading week between the end of classes and final exams would add a couple of weeks to the year."

He continues, "I understand there are certain schools that have honor codes which allow a student to schedule his own exams. A student can put all his exams off until the last day, or get rid of them quickly and go home. One could do the easy ones first, and spend several days studying for the harder ones. This accomplishes much of the reading week's purposes."

Rick Counsels

The New England VISTA and Peace Corps recruiting office in Bates Student Center has named Kathy Rick to counsel seniors on this campus on their opportunities in both Peace Corps and VISTA.

"My major responsibility is to let people know what kind of jobs are open to them following graduation. I'll also be available to answer questions and to help people fill out applications," said the representative.

"Acceptance is based on information about you from two sources: what you say about yourself in the application and what your references say about on their reference sheet," said Kathy to emphasize the importance of the application. She said that people who fill out the application on their own usually wind up understating their qualifications. "I've helped a lot of people fill them out and can usually save someone four or five hours of silent exasperation."

She listed some of the needs of Peace Corps and VISTA for training beginning this summer. Peace Corps is looking for 130 people to teach English as a second language in an Ivory Coast program. Peru wants 50 people with education degrees and new math experience to set up a curriculum for elementary students. Thailand wants zoology majors to help with the curriculum for elementary students. It seems that our own Dr. Lloyd Lux, a "let's give Hatch a sabbatical during football season" fame, but nonetheless director of athletics, took his mit out of the locker room and placed it in front of the announcer's mouth at Saturday's game. Allegedly censoring the marching band's routine of the tune "Gain Out of My Head" (gh, the sweet SMELL of victory) and the line "see you at the Cage", Dr. Lux allegedly stated that these selections implied (emphasis mine) "drunken football players" Dr. Lux, please accept my Pintine Point Award in absentia.

Should a Reading Week Precede Finals?

Part 2: Bowdoin's Style

by Margaret Flynn

On January 16, 1974, many Bowdoin students will face the first of their fall semester final examinations. Prior to that exam, they have chosen to enjoy the flexible Reading Period. The Reading Period at Bowdoin lasts from January 3rd through the 15th, and during that time, an instructor has the option of assigning a project, holding classes or allowing students to spend the entire time in preparation for his final.

According to Dr. John W. Ambrose, Associate Professor of Classics, the purpose of the Reading Period varies with each course. His own courses illustrate this point: "Beginning Greek meets right through, whereas in the Advanced Course I'll assign a paper, and in the poetry courses, I would usually ask that they work on particular poems and exegeses."

Dr. Elroy O. LaCesse, Jr., Professor of Physics, indicated that Reading Period assignments should entail approximately twelve hours of work per course, and that the final week of the period should be set aside for exam preparation. He cautioned that Reading Period should not induce the faculty to give unreasonable assignments, nor the students to consider the time as a ski vacation.

As the Reading Period was approved by the Bowdoin faculty, the decision concerning its use was left to the individual professor. "I feel that it has been a positive innovation," said Dr. Ambrose, "though when it was first instituted, it was not something everyone liked. Many faculty members guard their class hours zealously."

Next year Bowdoin will be joining Bates in the length of their first semester, which will begin shortly after Labor Day and end with finals in mid-December. This will mean the end of the long reading period at Bowdoin. However, according to Dr. LaCesse, the Bowdoin schedule will definitely include "a week for preparation for exams." "A week seems modest," Dr. Ambrose concluded. "And if the faculty at Bates decides to adopt one, the professors should be allowed to review it for two years.'

O.C. Obtains Land Lease

Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grimes of 4 Bayberry Lane, Lewiston, have recently granted full use of their farm in Sabattus to the Bates College outing club.

The property, known as the Fisher Farm, consists of 155 acres adjacent to the Fisher Cemetery. The natural environment of the farm will remain essentially unchanged. Foot trails, ski touring trails, lean-tons and similar facilities for activities such as hiking, canoing and nature study will be the only additions.

Use of the property will be limited to students, officially recognized campus organizations, college employees and guests of the College.

The College will be responsible to maintain the use limitation for purposes of conservation.

Use of all-terrain vehicles and snow machines will not be permitted except for occasional grooming of ski-touring trails. Every effort will be extended by the College to conserve the natural environment of the area, including the observation and reporting of infestation and plant disease.

The license for the use of the land will continue for an indefinite period consistent with the mutual benefit of the owner and of the College.

The quality of last year's units, he thinks, was just fine. But there were problems:

"A letter was sent around to all students explaining that there wasn't enough time to develop units," says Vic. "The class was in the middle of a transition."

This year each department will probably offer at least two STUs, of which one must be open to freshmen. "The committee will just examine the units that have been voluntarily proposed, and make any attempt to determine whether or not there's a broad enough spectrum. But we think the departments will be responsible towards their majors," Kingbury comments.

Carl Straub, head of the Education Policy Committee's Subcommittee on Short Term, is tallying 14 faculty and 60 student questionnaire responses concerning last year's ST.

"The faculty members' responses were generally favorable. They say some problems - not knowing for sure how heavy the assignments should be, not knowing the optimum number of students per course, how to implement things besides lectures and books," Straub reports.

Results of the student questionnaires are not compiled; they'll be presented at the November faculty meeting. However, Straub says, "Generally the student comments were also very favorable. They enjoy doing things differently from regular courses. I think that the purpose of the recent Short Term legislation was to allow students and teachers to concentrate on a particular project without interference from other academic activities. We're hoping more off-campus units will be established this year. I think everything will be much better when everyone's taking units."

Devaluation of the dollar is expected to have an impact on the European jaunts. Straub's only other major worry is registration: "The students who are going to come to Short Term ought to be able to get into the units they want."

Vic has anticipated one minor scheduling problem: "Some students would like to make up their physical education requirements during Short Term. But if the class takes off for a week-long birdwatching trip to Acadia, of course you can't take gym classes." He and Kingbury don't know exactly what could be done about that.

Whatever difficulties arise, however, Vic hopes students and teachers will give the system time to work them out. "If you look at Short Term this year and say, 'It's not that great,' don't conclude that we should go back to the old system. Give the school time to evaluate and work things out."
Coaching history and advising black students, as well as coaching football and lacrosse, to come to Bates. His reasoning was that the move into college ball would enable him "to find out if I wanted to coach for the rest of my life."

Along with the job came the problem of rebuilding a football program that was at its lowest point in the history of the school as a result of a losing streak that spanned four seasons. The greatest single factor involved in the sport's descent into oblivion was a lack of effective recruiting for several consecutive years. Former head coach Bob Hatch, now Assistant Athletic Director, worked extremely hard to coordinate a new recruiting program which has resulted in, "a freshman class which is the best anyone has ever seen here." However, Coach Gatto believes that his approach to the game will attract even more good athletes in the future, and he cites his experience last spring as an example. "When I got the job, I could only work with those that had been admitted and I know a few came because they believed in our approach to football." The meager athletic facilities here at Bates will undoubtedly handicap his recruiting, especially when in competition with Bowdoin and Colby, but he feels that his program offers a prospective student-athlete something that other schools do not.

The attitude of the players here now is important in terms of the overall program as well. "It has been tough for us to overcome the losing attitude that has existed here in the past few years. When a bad break occurs what is one's immediate response? Mine is that you must do something to overcome it, but a loser loses his aggressiveness, and that is what we must avoid with this team." In his senior at Harvard, Coach Gatto led his team to an undefeated season. But that season's meaning for him went far beyond an Ivy-League Championship. He was involved in an unusual situation players in his class did not play often during the course of three years. However, in his undefeated final year, the important team members were the same ones who had not played frequently before, but who stayed on because they liked football. "I see football as an educational experience because that is what it was for me as a player."

The important thing that I learned from it is that you could really commit yourself to each other in the endeavor. Football is important to me as a person because of that experience." Coach Gatto majored in history at Harvard and received a master's degree in education also from Harvard. It is clear that he regards himself as an educator and a faculty member. "I am doing all that I can to make this program contribute to the team players' education and this is rewarding to me as an educator. Most coaches talk about the X's and O's of football and don't worry about educating people. I think that the educational aspect must be your goal. As a dean, I was involved with the total life of the students and that is very rewarding, but I felt that this was something I could do, I felt it had to be done, and I wanted to do it."
One way in which this learning experience is brought about is through the self-grading of game films by the players. This entails both players and coaches judging a player's performance, and if there is a large disparity in grades, then Coach Gatto will discuss the performance with the player. In this way it is used as a learning tool as far as fundamentals, techniques and responsibilities of playing are concerned. It also opens lines of communication between the players and the coach. "We can be sure we understand each other this way. Communication is the only thing that I am here for. as I could mail the defenses and offensives in. I'm needed for strategy and evaluation and in these two areas, communication is vital. Communication in terms of evaluation is crucial if a player is to improve and it is important on the personal level as well. If they get a feeling that we are open, then I can help them in areas other than football."

Once Coach Gatto accepted the job here, he was warned by a great number of people, many in the educational field, that his concept of player-coach relations would not work due to his young age. However, he believed in his approach and has had no difficulties to date. "I think that respect is much more personal than just the age factor. Communication and the type of person you are is the crucial factor."

Coach Gatto chose a former Harvard teammate, Mike Georges, as his assistant because of his ability to communicate with players. Gatto describes him as a "tremendous football player and as one who believes in the same things about football that I do." Coach Georges coached at Boston College High for two years and attended law school last year.

Much of Coach Gatto's emphasis on interrelationships with people is a result of his experiences as Dean of Men at Middlesex. He describes his responsibilities there as those of an "ombudsman," since he dealt with the total student experience. While at Harvard he helped organize and run a job training summer camp for underprivileged minority students of all ages in Cambridge. Job training was given to the older students, while a recreational camp was set up for the younger ones. He described this program as a "great organizational and meaningful personal experience."

Coach Gatto and his family, wife Kathy, and their children Vic Jr. (Bubba) and Katie, like to relax at their summer home on Nantucket Island. Gatto enjoys the fishing, "as long as I am catching something," and they plan to spend some time there once the season ends.

As far as football strategy is concerned some of things to look for this year are a 5-2 defensive alignment, which is designed not to give up the long gain on the ground or in the air. Coach Gatto's thinking here is to force the other team to make mistakes. Offensively, the Cat's will attempt to integrate their running and passing and stay away from the third down and long yardage situation. The offensive philosophy is to keep the offense simple and to force the defense to adjust to it.

This year's schedule is highlighted by the return match with American International College - the only team the Cat's defeated last year - and by Bowdoin and Colby.

Coach Gatto allows his quarterback to select his own plays, which is contrary to the most recent college and pro trends, where the coach manipulates the plays from the sidelines. "It is the players' game and I don't want to take it away from them. The big advantage is that it gives the team confidence in the quarterback, and he can then motivate them, which is extremely important."

Coach Gatto exudes quiet confidence, the same self-assuredness that he possessed as a great player for Harvard. He is confident that he can bring respectability back to Bates football. However, respectability is not his only goal. Coach Gatto is a man interested in people, not just football ability, and he hopes to make his players' educational experience a more meaningful one. "The crucial thing is the education. This is a change in the approach to football anywhere; we are making football an educational experience in a way that is not being done at any other college in the country."

Vic Gatto brings a new and important dimension to the Bates' athletic program, and his true value can not be measured by his won-lost record.
CATS LOOK GOOD, DESPITE LOSS TO BRIDGEPORT

by John Willhoit

The Bates soccer team looked impressive in defeat last Saturday vs. the No. 2 team in New England. Indeed, the 1-0 loss at the hands of the tough University of Bridgeport team boosted the Bobcats' hopes for the rest of the season as they proved to themselves that they can compete on an equal basis with a highly skilled soccer team. With a few breaks they could have turned the tables on the Huskies and sent them back to Connecticut with a loss that would certainly have dropped them a notch or two in the New England rankings.

Coach Davis Van Winkle praised the defense which very nearly shut out the potent Bridgeport attack. He cited goalie John White and fullback Dave Ellis in particular. White made several sparkling saves, and Ellis shut off Bridgeport's high-scoring left wing, Kevin Welsh, who scored three goals against the Cats in Bridgeport last year. But while the defense has improved considerably over last year (Bridgeport blistered the nets for eight goals against the Bobcats last season), the offense seems to have lost its punch. They have been shut out in both of their regular season contests. This seems strange because offense was expected to be their strong point while the defense was considered a question mark. The Cats' lack of offense may be attributed to the type of game they had to play against a team like Bridgeport. Against U. Maine last Tuesday Coach Van Winkle probably played the same formation, with center halfback Pat McInerny playing almost like a fourth fullback. Against Bridgeport the wing halfbacks, John Peterson and Dirk Visser, also had to spend most of their time on defense, but against any other team they will be able to concentrate a little more on generating some offensive punch. McInerny, then, will still concentrate almost solely on defense.

The next Bobcat home game will be today vs. Brandeis at 2:30.

HARRIED HARRIERS:
SQUEEZE MIDDLEBURY, STOMP COLBY

by Russ Keenan & Andy Lovely

Cross-Country improved its won-loss record to 6-3 as Bates scored a double victory over Middlebury and Colby during the half-time of the Bates-Tufts football game. Since the team runs against a strong herd of Black Bears this Tuesday at Orono, strategy for the Middlebury-Colby meet consisted of a "pack-run" where the Bates crew sticks together and overwhelms their opponents through sheer numbers. As the harriers went through their first mile at a faster pace than during the usual free-for-all, it became apparent this strategy was susceptible to a highly infectious strain originating in the vicinity of Waterville, Me., and known to all as "Turkeyitis". Be that as it may, Bates took the meet with a score of 24 points to Middlebury's 32 and Colby's 85.

Of notable comment was the effort of one Lew Pacquin, former Colby star who ran unofficially in the meet, taking the non-scoring first place position. As for the official results, the Bates pack was lead by Bruce Merrill as he captured his first victory on Garcelon Field with the time, 24:42.5. Not far behind Bruce was Bob "Chaseman" Chaseman in a fine comeback performance from sickness and injuries. Rounding out the Bates score were Russ Keenan in 4th, Jim Anderson in 8th, Norm Graf in 9th, Scott Bicrman in 10th and Chris Taylor in 12th. Although too numerous to mention here, there were fine performances turned in by the other 11 members of the team as they improved their times and added to the Bobcat's depth.

By the time you are reading this article, the X-C's record will be either one better or one worse as the harriers meet U. Maine on the latter's home course. This Saturday, Bates again hosts during the halftime football game, as the thinclads go against Trinity College.
BATES LEAPS TO .500

by Bill Cuthbertson

After a disappointing loss at St. Lawrence in the season's opening game, the Cat's bounced back with a 6-0 victory over Tufts, giving Coach Vic Gatto his first win as a collegiate coach. The closeness of a 6-0 victory over Tufts, giving game, the Cat's bounced back with Lawrence in the season's opening with a score kept the game from the final 6-0 score is misleading as of the finest performances ever by a tailback Chris Ham, who gave one compared with 54 for Tufts. game, running 86 total plays, as Bates' running back, as he gained consistently stopped Tufts and held them to a meager 52 yards rushing this time, as sophomore wingback the offense was not to be denied in the first half. Missed opportunities came with 2:05 left in the game, but tackles Paul Delciopio and Dan Lamond threw the Tufts' passer for consecutive losses back to the five yard line to seal the victory. This win takes on added importance as the Cat's needed some momentum going into the toughest part of their schedule. The loss of MacDonald for several weeks due to an ankle injury will undoubtedly hamper the Cat's offense, but it is hoped that freshman Marcus Bruce coming off a fine performance against Tufts will be able to pick up some of the slack. The Cat's displayed the potential on Saturday to beat any team on their schedule, but the mistakes which were so untimely against Tufts must be eliminated if they are to defeat the better teams. The answer as to whether or not they can accomplish that will come on Saturday at 1:30 when the Cat's host a fine Trinity team.

Clubbers Score 2 Wins in Two Days

by Claudia Turner

In keeping with tradition, the Bates' Field Hockey team is still undefeated as of the games with Westbrook and U. Maine at Farmington last week. This made their record 3-0 in regular season play (when you read this, the team will have played Colby).

In the Westbrook game, the girls romped to a 10-0 score on the opposition's home field. There were very few times the "Brookers" got to what promises to be an exciting match.

In J.V. action, Janet Zullo combined with Nancy Johnson for 3 goals in a 3-0 victory over the U. Maine at Orono, earlier this season and should give Bates a good game. Plan to be at what promises to be an exciting match.
WHERE FOWL IS FAIR

by Cathy Anne Gallant

"Eat, drink, and be merry" but just remember who is footing the bill! Without fail, inflation and the food shortage have slowly invaginated their way into Bates reality for the 1973-74 academic year.

"This will be a nervous year for me," Craig Canedy, Director of Food Services, acknowledged. "It will be tough to keep within our budget when meat prices are up 15 to 18 per cent and vegetable and fruit prices are 8 to 10 per cent higher than last year."

Canedy emphasized however, the fact that the "shortage" as such, has not actually effected the food supply at the Commons. Price though, is another story.

"Luckily, we're now seeing a decline in beef prices. Pork is still up but bacon has dropped considerably. Fowl is also lower, chicken being the lowest," he stated. "This year each dorm will be limited to two barbecues during short term."

According to Canedy, there has been to date little criticism of the current changes in food policy. The Food Committee, a group composed of representatives from all four classes, is due to meet with the director in the near future. This will provide a channel for any student complaints or suggestions. Canedy believes that the overall student body "has understood" the situation. He desires to keep the lines of communication open for suggestions about the new "diet plate" to actual student recipes.

"If we don't do as much as we can for the students," he asserted, "we're not doing them justice."

Alice's Restaurant is a hilarious film starring Arlo Guthrie, telling of his famous misadventures depicted in Guthrie's record and book. The story of a "sort of commune" that in Outline's record and book more. It is not so much Arlo's story as the story of a "sort of commune" that came and falls under pressure from the very things it was set up to avoid. It is a film that is both wildly funny and touching, not yet with a congruity that makes the film's message all the more potent.

But, all was not lost for the team. After losing the first game, Pam Wanaker pulled herself together and finished with a (6-2), (6-1) victory in the singles spot. The two freshmen on the team, Sara Landers and Nancy Schroeter, playing second doubles, gave the team their second match, winning easily (6-0), (6-1). Hopefully, some of this winning tennis will rub off on the first doubles team in time for future matches.
