O.C. Debates Alpine Skiing: Is It Environmentally Harmful?

by Nancy Dodson

A good number of students here are interested in alpine skiing. Many of them take advantage of Outing Club trips to ski areas during the winter. Most of them, however, are unaware that for the past three years there has been an extensive debate within Outing Club Council about whether the OC should actively promote alpine skiing. The intent of this article is to let skiers know just what is going on behind the scenes, what effects it might have and what you can do about it.

The skiing issue has arisen because of a perceived conflict in the two stated purposes of the OC. They are 1) to provide the means for enjoying outdoor and other recreational activities; and 2) to enhance and protect the environment in which these activities take place. A good majority of Council members feel that skiing is detrimental to the environment for two main reasons. First, a mountain loses much of its natural beauty when developed into a ski area. Secondly, the generation of power for the running of lifts requires a great deal of energy. Having agreed that skiing conflicts with one of the OC’s purposes but is in line with the other (since there is definitely demand for the running of ski trips), it was decided that Council should set its priorities straight and make some sort of policy decision. This past Sunday a special meeting of Council was called to discuss the topic.

There is general agreement among Council members that development of

by Brad Fuller

Despite the lack of advance publicity and the fact that the fourth game of the World Series was being played, a near capacity crowd filled the chapel to hear Georgia State Senator Julian Bond speak.

Mr. Bond stressed that he came to Bates to lecture as a politician, something which he said is viewed by some as the “second oldest profession.” He also informed us that he was among the “finest body of men money could buy.”

Switching to the serious side, Bond emphasized that as our nation approaches its two-hundredth birthday, many are afraid of what the future may bring. We have a fairly new President elected by a majority of one, and international as well as domestic turmoil highlighted by sharply rising prices, but outside the borders of the United States we see rapid change. Some examples he gave were the North Vietnamese reorganizing their country after their victory, and Latin America succeeding in its struggle against oppression. Only here in America, Bond says, is there indecision.

The oppressed have risen and fallen very quickly. Despite victories won yesterday at the lunch counter, on the bus and in the movie houses, and today’s increase in black political office holders, the conditions are basically unchanged. In the 1970’s, black infant mortality rates are higher, blacks receive an average salary of only $4,000, and they die seven years earlier than the average white. Bond notes that blacks are the last to be hired and the first to be fired. Therefore, Bond adds, although there was a general improvement, relative conditions have diminished.

Bond sees the political reigns of this country as being seized by people who have forgotten the unrepresented elements of American society. He thinks the two most recent elections have given this group more power, and legislation has cut sharpest against the people at the bottom. “The benign concern of the ‘60’s has now turned to malignant neglect,” he says. Urban renewal is winding down, student loans have been cut and a sixty percent pullback in social services has been enacted. Bond says that many problems of society are worked out on a balance sheet with the “solicitude of a mortician at an old folk’s home.”

For blacks, Bond notes, the economic gains of the 60’s are slipping. One-third of black children are in poverty at the present, and a black college graduate will make less than a white high school dropout. Bond sees the liberal crusaders of yesterday as becoming tired. He makes the analogy that they would continued on p. 8

R.A. Gets Budget Requests

by John Blatchford

“Hey buddy! Gotta couple hundred for a needy organization? One hundred? Ten! A dime!”

Last Friday, The Student went to Kevin Ross, Treasurer of the Representative Assembly, and Chairman of the Budget Committee, to find out the budget requests for each campus organizations. This included increases and decreases in existing organizations and requests for new organizations. The Budget Committee does not have the final say in the making of the individual budgets. This is a student organization, made up of interested individuals who are not necessarily members of the R.A. The Budget Committee interviews each organization requesting money. Included in each interview is a question by the committee asking whether that organization would like to see some interaction with other organizations

Grade Inflation:

The Prosecution Rests

Grade Inflation makes college transcripts becoming so crowded with A's and B's that chapters of Phi Beta Kappa are reported to be raising the minimum grade average required, to safeguard the honor society's traditional exclusivity. A study of grades in one community college found that the proportion of the school's students receiving an A in the first semester rose from 9.7 percent in 1963-1964 to 12 percent in 1968-1969 and 21 percent in 1971-1972. A 1974 study of recent grading procedures in 544 colleges across the country found that a student receiving a poor grade can often take the course over. This held for any grade in 303 colleges, for D or F in 442, and for F alone in 295 out of the 544 schools. In 325 of the institutions studied, when a course was repeated, only the last grade was taken into account in computing the grade point average. Grade inflation makes no sense in terms of either of the two prevalent positions toward grades, the progressive or the traditional. According to the progressive view, grades are at best unnecessary, at worst harmful. Students should study because of their interest in the subject, its value for their future career, or not study at all. Progressives argue that under the grading system students are treated like Pavlovian dogs — in need of frequent "reinforcement." While theoretically a B- can be as clear a signal as an F or a D, and a B+ could eventually take on the meaning of a C, the various letters have just enough cultural and emotional resonance for student after student to be miscued into believing the system is meaningful. For them, the grades are more like the kind of medicine that must be gotten down, or is a necessary step in a career ladder, need something extrinsic to encourage good performance. This is not just a concession to human nature; it is seen as valuable training in "life." A student who learns to work hard for a good grade is thought to gain a self-discipline that will later help him adjust to other tasks in the real world which he will dislike but must perform. A student who cannot learn to live with competition over grades, however, will rank, will find the much harsher competitiveness of adult life even more difficult to take. Finally, so long as selecting some people and rejecting others is inherent in many fields of activity, it seems preferable to base the sorting process on an explicit criterion rather than a subjective one. Grades are less subject to favoritism and paternalism than personal evaluations. Whichever philosophy one subscribes to, neither provides a rationale for the kind of wishy-washy grading now on the increase. It has all the disadvantages of a grade hierarchy with few of its benefits. It does rank and label people, but does not give them clear performance cues. While theoretically A-B-C-D-F should be a standardized system of meaningful grades or the abolition of all grades — eliminating grade inflation one way or the other. At the least, each department should compile and circulate statistics on the average.

Ozone Rehashed

To the Editor:

T. H. Ehige's letter, "Ozone Regained," certainly doesn't put the reader on "the bandwagon of folks who perennially bitch about the cats here." It makes T. H. himself the president of the Complainants Club. If all the four grand means to him is a good hamburger, something is wrong with his values. Why doesn't he save some money for that someone who sends him here and go to a good restaurant? The food at Bates is far better than that of many other colleges, private and state alike. If he doesn't believe this he can make his own test by trying the food at some other places. "The toilers underneath the dining room" are doing a good job on some things at least, even if their cooking can't compare to room's. Our solution is also a simple one, for the complaints anyway. T. H., why don't you join the toilers and show us something better, it's all too easy to sit back in your ivory tower and tell others what they can do. Sincerely, Food is not the purpose of college.

I feel a comment is necessary on last week's off-color cartoon by Bill Allen. If the cartoon is referring to personal acquaintances it is a cheap shot. There are less public places to play for public joke. If the cartoon is directed at the general social milieu on campus I have other criticisms. I realize the cartoonist's traditional subject matter is politics, sex, and sexuality, but a cartoonist is most noted for his wit and subtlety. Both were lacking. A little subtlety would not be wasted on such a highly educated audience. To rephrase a cliche, if you can't think of something in better taste to draw don't draw anything at all. Dear Answerman,
Can you tell me why it is that so many of our administrators and professors are graduates of Middlebury? Among those who seem to have jumped from the Vermont woods are Professors Reese, Peabram, Carpenter and Dorsey and Dean Thomas. That's just an example. There are others. What's the draw?
A Friend of a Middlebury Senior

Dearest Answerman,
I'd like to express my most enthusiastic congratulations to Dean Judith Isaacson for her intended persecution, er, prosecution of those wicked, evil, and highly dangerous water balloon throwers. Short-sighted viewers may consider other malignancies on campus more detrimental to our goals here at Bates. Fortunately, we are blessed with Dean Isaacson. Her brilliant insight, superb strategic planning and consummate comprehension of campus conflicts has borne out the fact that the explosive "Water balloon issue" is resolved before all other problems are to be addressed. Her unyielding, dogmatic and extremely time-consuming pursuit of the nefarious and psychotic "Water balloon Gang" is an example of her ability to realize the proper priorities for achieving campus tranquility.
My question to you, oh esteemed Answerman: Why is Dean Isaacson spending so much of her (and other peoples') time detecting the members of that hoodlum group rather than trying to correct some of the more pressing campus problems?
I Can't Believe This Is Happening

Dear Eye,
You've got to realize that Dean Isaacson has been trying to nail those nefarious Pierce House boys for years. Sure, you don't believe that. But I do. She has spent the last 17 years of her life trying to catch them. The trouble with Isadora is that she shows herself in a purely sexual sense. We don't get to see her in other roles. She must have some other side! Even her writing is full of eroticism. I fear that Ms. Jong mistakes the prolific use of four letter words and constant sexual yearnings and activity as honesty. It is much too easily misconstrued as a sexual obsession. It is not merely that she is sexually obsessed. She has no other role conception of her personhood. She must imagine herself in love. She must have a man. The following quotations taken from a scene in which she is speaking to her lover:

"I used to stare and stare at that beautiful profile wondering what in the world was happening in his head and why I couldn't seem to lash out..."
"I want to get inside your head; I said, "and I can't. It's driving me crazy."

"But why do you want to get inside my head? What do you think that will solve?"
"It's just that I want to feel close to someone, united with someone, whole for once. I want to really love someone."

"What makes you think love solves anything?"
"Maybe it doesn't solve anything, I said. But I want it. I want it whole."

The implication being, of course, that she will never feel whole without the illusion of love. She cannot fly out on her own. She cannot so much as write about someone without lashing out at the world. Erica Jong's style is flowing and quite conversational. It moves quickly through the first half, more slowly to the finish. Fear of Flying is her attempt at writing the ultimate in feminine literature and decried as a piece of pornographic trash. It is probably neither, falling somewhere in between. It is certainly a valiant attempt at the former, and it is rather regrettable that it has failed.

- Editors Note — Yes folks, the Man is back. Rumor had it that Answerman had been kidnapped by ex-editor Scott "Duke" Williams and forced to listen to him read from Thomas Pynchon and James Joyce until he went mad (about two minutes). The Student crack team of reactionary terrorists were recently able to liberate him from a seedy Newburyport, Mass. apartment. The only reported casualties were Duke's split infinitives and dangling participles.

Please address all questions to Answerman, Box 309.

ACKNOWLEDGED: What was all that noise at J.B. about Saturday night? A close inspection of the scene showed that there were at least 250 people (even some rowdy parents) just standing around doing what people do at keg parties. It was good to see D.S. back in his old form, killing the last keg. I wonder what the administration thinks about parents (you know, the folks who pay the bills) hanging around at keg parties. I think it's great, but possibly socially unacceptable! Credit for the extravagant belongs to Vic, Sully, Ron, Chris, Murphy, Batesy, Woo-woo, JOE, Jonesy, the J.B. NUT SQUAD. FOOTBALL FORECAST: Start drinking early for this one; B.D. picks C. W. POST 34-40. A lot of injuries this week in practice.

LOCK OF THE WEEK: Bates Football Team, a team wins games not individuals. Congratulation to Capt. Jim on his performance in Hartford.

P.S. here are some people are good fighters, some people are good lovers, I happen to be both.

Erica Jong's style is flowing and quite conversational. It moves quickly throughout the first half, more slowly to the finish. Fear of Flying has been both hailed as a major work in feminist literature and decried as a piece of pornographic trash. It is probably neither, falling somewhere in between. It is certainly a valiant attempt at the former, and it is rather regrettable that it has failed.
A great point in the game is what is termed a "pick-on." A player is off side when the ball has been kicked, touched or run with by any of his own side behind him. The player is on side when the ball has been kicked or touched by any player of the opposite side or when any player of his own side has kicked the ball from behind him or run before. When a player is off side, he is considered out of the game until he is put on side. A player catching the ball on the bound or fly, may run with it.

The Game

Between Tufts second eleven and the Bates boys was called at eleven o'clock, and was played before an enthusiastic crowd with L. W. Aldrich of Tufts and A. L. Morey of Bates as umpires. They selected W. W. Campbell of Tufts as the referee. The Tufts eleven was composed of the following: H. D. Nash, captain; C. F. Spurgeon, A. P. French, G. H. Wyman, E. C. Adams as substitutes. The Bates eleven was composed of the following: H. D. Nash, captain; J. H. Adams, H. Rundlett, C. F. Puseley, A. E. Tuttle, L. M. Sessions, C. M. Hutchinson, F. H. C. Housley, A. Gatchell, with N. P. Noble, E. C. Adams as substitutes.

The Tufts had the kick-off and sent the ball well into the field, but the Bates were there to drive in back. Then began a contest which sometimes seemed lost and yet again gained by Bates until Nash of Tufts pushed boldly over the line and obtained a "touch-down" for Tufts. This counted so much toward a victory. The half hour expired and the two changed sides and the Bates had the kick-off. Hutchins sent the ball well to the front. Again a fierce struggle, and the muscle of Bates began to show itself against the agile, but at this point, one of Bates men was injured and time called. Again they were at it and Tufts claimed a "touch-down" which was claimed by Morey as a foul in favor of Bates. The referee decided in favor of Tufts, and again they were at it. The half hour having expired they changed sides and Tufts had the kick-off. One of Tufts' men was injured, and finally Tufts gained the advantage and Wash was called on to try for a twenty-five yard field goal, which resulted in favor of Tufts, giving them the victory.

It was decided to try again, changing sides, as there were yet thirteen minutes before the expiration of the half hour. This resulted in no particular advantage for either side. Three rouching cheers for each party were exchanged, and also for umpires and referee. The fastest runner in Tufts was Weaver, who made some excellent dodging. Nash, Campbell, and Squires ran in a superior manner, and gained many points.

While all of Bates were inexperienced and almost ignorant of the rules, yet J. W. Smith distinguished himself by both sides being perfectly satisfied, and the Tufts go home well pleased with their visit, while the Bates boys will profit by their defeat, and practice in the gymnasium with all speed, in order that next year, in which they expect to show more knowledge of the game.

Incidents a la Kicks

There were, of course, many incidents which were remarkable, and in a certain degree, a tragic aspect. In the first fell-pelt charge a member of the Bates eleven got demoralized, and fell down in an adjournment of ten minutes, during which several gentlemen assisted a young man off the field, with two ghastly wounds in his breeches. A surgical operation with needle and thread was required afterward, and after a brief respite the game was resumed and the wounded man fainted a good fight.

Occasionally ten or twelve men get into a promiscuous scramble for the possession of the ball and came forth rubbing their shins and using such electional phrases as Juggernaut. "Not infrequently a man was tripped in the race and stood on his head in a manner that made one think he would lose his head. You could see in this game what attitude a classic young gentleman strikes, when he has an accident. The cuticle off their shins.

It was rough and tumble, all along, dear reader, as ever you did experience when the big boys used to call "you" in your pinfarine days. The boys blew and floundered like a school of hake for our purposes. Over once, a six-footer lighted on a diminutive kicker and took him by the nape of the neck to stay that diminutive kicker's movements toward glory. Here and there naked arms and shoulders were disclosed and tattered clothing burned down the athletes' sides. The dodging and running were very sharp, and everything was so completely gutted and happy, that among the grave audiatores even Charles Clark was seen to smile. The Tufts were all struggling for the possession of the ball in the soft and yielding earth—many at a loss to see the precious and classic soul of Bates on the ampler portion of their trowsers.

In the midst of the merriest attendanee upon these rollickin' in the satunalia one Professor was observed so absorbed in the game that he forgot himself and found himself in the very arena, evidently before he was aware of it, surrounded by a whole bevy of kickers. Awakening suddenly to the consciousness of the gravity of the situation, the Professor retired at a double-quick, and in great disorder—gracefully covering his retreat with a few complimentary remarks on the character of the game.

If driven over the end line and not over "goal," the ball counts one point in favor of the tuftics, which is said to be the "touch-down," and of these, if no goal is made, is said to decide the game.

The Tufts club returned to Boston on the 4.15 P.M. train, with the laurels on their brows and the cuticle off their shins.

The excitement and glamour of Las Vegas returns once again to the Bates campus as the Chase Hall Committee presents Casino this Saturday night in Chase Hall. There will be real gambling, an incredible night club, voluptuous cigarette girls, and even a dance hall. Admission to everything is only 50 cents, a pittance for an evening such as this, and it all starts at eight o’clock.

The gambling will take place upstairs primarily in Skelton and Hirasaaw, with a couple of small rooms open for the hard-core poker players. The games will include, in addition to poker, black jack, faro, baccarat, and crap’s. A complete set of rules and instructions about how to play will be printed and distributed to enable everyone to win the fortune of his or her dreams. All players to play will be printed up and set of rules and instructions about how to play will be printed and distributed to enable everyone to win the fortune of his or her dreams. All

The entire show will be emceed by none other than the irrepressible Rich Goldman. And pasties and fake but good drinks will be available for a small price and will be served to your table. And last but certainly not least, there will be dancing all night under soft lights in the Den to the beautiful music provided free of charge by the official Bates jukebox.

As always, everyone is expected to dress in appropriate attire. For guys, this can mean anything from that dreezy jacket you haven’t worn in years to the satorial splendor of a tuxedo or tails. And the girls usually wear a long, slinky dress or evening gown. Certainly the sight of a few hundred dressed-up Batersies is alone worth the price of admission. So it looks like Casino will again be an event one should not miss and certainly the opportunity to win some money gambling is not to be lost.

WRJR: The Suffering of a Station

by Gary Jones

In case you didn’t already know it, Bates does have a radio station. And it could use your support and ears. Despite an inadequate budget and equipment which even Marconi would have found primitive, WRJR is on the air every day, and has about one hundred hours of shows each week.

But WRJR does have problems. It is hoped that the budget for next year will be increased enough to enable the station to improve the sound quality of its broadcasts. But, for this year, unless the powers that be decide the station is worthy of the improvements will be possible, and there will be a deficit even if there are no problems with the equipment breaking down. It is likely that aid would be forthcoming in the case of a major breakdown, but with the college trying to hold down expenses, WRJR doesn’t seem to have a high enough priority for any great financial assistance in the near future.

WRJR is on the air Monday through Friday from 12 noon to 2 a.m., and Saturday and Sunday from 9 in the morning to 2 a.m. Most of the shows feature rock music of various styles. But on Sunday afternoons, classical music is featured, and there is a show called Food for the Soul at 3 p.m. A weekly programming guide will be printed up soon and find its way into everyone’s mailbox. So listen in to WRJR to your favorite D.J.’s for an alternative to commercial radio stations.

PIRG On Power

This November 4 the nuclear power issue in Maine is coming to a vote. A petition drive began by a group called Safe Power for Maine (SPFM) will be put to a vote by the people of Maine. The petition will be for a seven-year moratorium on the building of nuclear power plants in Maine. Three criteria have been established which must be met during this period of time: safety, disposal of nuclear wastes, and alternate forms of energy. When these factors are adequately dealt with the governor would have the power to lift the moratorium.

On October 30, Bates Public Interest Research Group is presenting a program dealing with this issue. The film called Energy: the Nuclear Alternative will be shown and Phillip Townley, (of Safe Power for Maine) will speak. Everyone on or off campus is invited to come. Don’t forget! Thursday, October 30 at 7:00 p.m. in Skelton Lounge, Chase Hall.

Set For Saturday “Brand New Day”

This Saturday evening at 7:30 in Schaeffer Theatre, the Bates Student Council is sponsoring an original musical play. Brand New Day, performed by the Brand New Day Community of Manville, R.I., is based on the Acts of the Apostles. This is a lively and innovative musical. For only 75 cents, you’ll have a great hour and a half of entertainment. Buy your tickets at the door, or in the dinner line.

Since the play starts at 7:30, you’ll still have plenty of time for Casino afterwards!
Field Hockey Downs U.R.I.

by Betsy Williams and Claudia Turner

A funny thing happened to Rhode Island on their trip to that podunk little school in Maine — they lost. Yes, fellow Batesies, that big gun of the northeast, U.R.I., was victim to the new innovative offense of Bates which uses the strategy of play where you want, when you want, as long as you're moving fast. Sandi Korpela got the game going with a fast break goal from the left side position. - or was it the left-out, or the missing link? Anyway, it was a well placed shot. She outdodged several defenders, and fired it into the opposite corner of the net.

That was only the beginning. Becky Hillfack's tenacity paid off as she executed a nifty scoop that fooled the feet of the U.R.I. goalie, and found its way between the goal posts. The fighting felines, now proud possessors of a 2-0 lead, kept the pressure on. Effective passing, combined with continuous cutting for the ball, left the U.R.I. defense running in circles. Except for several unsuccessful fast-breaks, the "Rhodies" couldn't seem to penetrate the Bates "brick-wall" defense. Between the second and third quarter, the ball was not given the Bobcats back to the Tufts 28, where giving Bates its second straight break.

On the defensive side, pounced on the ball, defensive end, Bob Berluti and recovered the ball on the Bobcats' 4 yard touchdown pass. That score proved to be the only of the game. The Bates defense held in the final quarter, as well as being second in the defense's work by the Bobcats, and Berluti was forced to punt from his own endzone. Bates got the ball on the Bobcats' 23 yard line.

The only touchdown of the game came in the third quarter. It was set up by a beautiful Nick Dell'Eратio punt which went out of bounds on the two yard line. Tufts was unable to move the ball anywhere because of the fine defensive work by the Bobcats, and Berluti was forced to punt from his own endzone. Bates got the ball on the Tufts' 23 yard line.

The game marked the 100 anniversary of collegiate football in Maine, more or less. The actual centennial is Nov. 6th, but it was against Tufts that the first game was played. This time, Bates won 7-0.

As was everything Saturday, the game was played on a very sloppy, wet field. The field and cold wind hampered the offense of both clubs.

Bates had several opportunities to score in the first quarter, but was rebuffed each time by a stubborn Tufts defense. Defensive tackle Paul, Dell'Eратio blocked a punt by Tufts Bob Berluti and recovered the ball on their 10 yard line. The Bates offense, on three runs by Nick Dell'Eратio, was able to get the ball to the 4 yard line. Then, on 4th down, a Hugo Colasante pass fell incomplete and the Jumbos took over on downs.

Five plays later, with the ball on their 15, Tufts fumbled for the first time in the game. Bates' Bill Ryan, a freshman fullback, added some fresh strength to the lineup. Sue Beckwith came in as left haliback, adding some fresh strength while shifting around the positioning on the left side. Bates had lost the momentum of the first half, and because of this, Michelle Fleuranz, with the determined backing of the U.R.I. team, managed to put one in past Marty Pease. Bates rallied and answered with one more of their own, courtesy of Wilde, who brought her season total to 16. And as long as we're talking about statistics, Bates has scored 26 goals against opponents in eight games, for a 3.25 goals per game average, while Marty has only allowed 6 goals to be scored against her so far this season.

The J.V. team hustled to a big 3-1 win over U.R.I. also. At halftime, U.R.I. led with a single goal by Lisa Hartnell, but the Bobcats hadn't yet warmed up. In the second half they were hot! Everyone on the team was moving aggressively, and this was exemplified by the number of people that scored. Leslie Dean, Kim Joseph, and Nancy Ingersoll each tallied one, while the whole squad really put on the pressure with a stubborn defense and an offensive line that out-dodged their opponents to the goal.

Bates goes into the state single elimination tournament this weekend. As of this writing, Bates is off to a 1-1 record in tournament play and has pulled even with U.M.D.J. to 8-8. To get down for a couple of games at Bowdoin. It would be worth your while, and the team would appreciate your support.
Booters Upset Hartford 4-3
by Fred Clark

Captain Jim Tonrey scored all four of his team's goals (the "hat trick" plus one) in leading Bates booters to a second consecutive upset at the University of Hartford, 4-3. The win was a big one over a perennially strong Hartford team. It took place last Saturday in the midst of a deluge — the rains fell hard, the field was soaked but Bates' "water puppies" had come to play. Bates completely dominated the first half as they seemed right at home in the sodden slop. The "Duck", Mark Drummey (partly nicknamed considering the weather), and Stan Pelli led the charges through the mud and developed the effective sliding tackles that helped Bates in beating Hartford to the ball consistently.

The first score came early as the Bates attack culminated in a Mike Coutman shot. His attempt was saved but the rebound came to Tonrey who calmly put it away. Steve McCormick, who played a good game at wing, scored on the second goal when his shot across the goalmouth was mishandled by the goalkeeper and Tonrey was in position to redirect the ball into the net. The third goal of the game belonged to Hartford as their Fancy Footers took advantage of the Bates backs. John Mota, converted a corner kick. Claudia Iida, who has played so well this year, gained on the last two goals which were sandwiched around a pair by Hartford. Iida crossed two balls — one off a corner kick that Tonrey played into goals. The first was a pretty shot into the corner which was hit on the fly. The latter was simply shoved into an open net with the body. Despite the continual second half pressure by U.H., this goal, minus the body. Despite the continual second half pressure by U.H., this goal, this goal,...

This week's "Athlete of the Week" is Oparowski, used a strong finishing kick and two-time winner, Gerry LaFlamme in the homestretch to take fourth place, and sweet revenge for Gerry's seventh out of eight this year. Gerry won the meet since the legendary Neill Miner finished 2nd, 6 seconds later; with himself, even if the meet officials won't admit it. Bates had the race well in hand. Rick DeBruin, a combination of good goaltending by Jim Hill (a tough job on such a day), a few chokes and a good measure of luck. Each team hit the post once or twice but none really rolled several just wide. Both teams could have scored two or three goals on breakaways but didn't. Play continued in an unpleasurable downpour for most of the game. One other frustration — there is no other way to kick a soccer ball out of a large four-inch puddle? It's a lot of energy expended unless you have a move like Pelli (or is that spelt Pile?). He took the ball in four inches of water and flicked it with his toe straight up in the air, over an oncoming defender and out of the puddle before going merrily along his way. Maybe this is an element of truth when a frustrated Hartford opponent said following the game that Bates knew how to play well in sloppy field conditions. But then what team can claim to have a duck playing for them? No, to be honest, two Jim names and Hill didn't hurt either.

Foot Notes — Hate to spoil your weekend but the soccer team will be praying for rain next Saturday. The water on the pitch (this is a Shippensburg, Bright term by the way) take on Clark University on Garcelon Field at 10:00 o'clock. Earlier score U.H. 0, Bates 2, Harkness 0 in a game played last Wednesday in Orono. Analysis of the week: The Hartford game showed the Bates boys a lot of the game belonged to Hartford as their Fancy Footers took advantage of the Bates backs. John Mota, converted a corner kick. Claudia Iida, who has played so well this year, gained on the last two goals which were sandwiched around a pair by Hartford. Iida crossed two balls — one off a corner kick that Tonrey played into goals. The first was a pretty shot into the corner which was hit on the fly. The latter was simply shoved into an open net with the body. Despite the continual second half pressure by U.H., this goal, minus the body. Despite the continual second half pressure by U.H., this goal, this goal,...

Parents Enjoy Their Weekend

by June Peterson

Neither rain, nor cold, nor lack of motel accommodations could stop Parents’ Weekend from coming and, despite the less than favorable weather, spirits remained undampened.

Soon after registration opened, the excitement began and the field hockey team defeated the University of Rhode Island (U.R.I.). The tennis team played well against U.R.I. Although the computer demonstration wasn’t extremely well attended, those there found it most interesting. Planetarium shows were said by many to be very impressive and authentic. Many enjoyed the hooked rug exhibit which included some very unique works. “Tango,” affectionately nicknamed by some “The Last Tango in Lewiston,” was well attended. Although various reactions to the play were evident, all seemed to agree that the acting was excellent. A great deal of work went into the Faculty Panel Discussion which reflected on the American character.

A total of about seventeen hundred people were served at the buffet in the Cage and in Commons. The buffet’s theme was the bicentennial, complete with red, white and blue eating utensils. The theme was the bicentennial, complete with red, white and blue eating utensils. The announcements that the soccer and volleyball teams had won their games were greeted enthusiastically by fans. The chapel, where the College Choir and the Bates College Modern Dance Co. performed, was packed Saturday night.

Music at the Semi-formal Dance in Chase Lounge was good, although few attended. It seems that students and parents alike agree that the band was one that the parents enjoyed more than the students.

The Merrimanders and Deansmen Concert in the theater was excellent. Those who arrived a little on the late side found there was standing room only.

Dean Isaacson greatly enjoyed talking with parents and younger brothers and sisters of Bates students. She was pleased with the response from parents and hadn’t spoken with any whose sons or daughters weren’t happy here. Many of the younger brothers and sisters interested in Bates had interviews while here. Those parents who have had more than one child attend Bates seem especially sad to realize that as the last one nears Senior year the number of...
