Hathorn Bell/Clapper Stolen

The recent nonfunctioning of Hathorn's Bell is due to the fact that about 40 pounds of essential metal are missing. The reason for this is that some of us are tired of being rung out of bed; rung out of class; rung from stall to stall (Bates College stables).

Does Bates college enjoy the power yielded by its surrogate Factory Whistle?

We prefer to check in and out on our private time clocks. We do not intend to retain the Bell Clapper as Hostage but we would appreciate a response to our concerns.

NEVER LET IT BE SAID THAT COLLEGE STUDENTS ONLY COMPLAIN AND AVOID ACTION.

"The Student" received this anonymous message on Thursday, March 16. We of "The Student" urge the return of the clapper. Assistance will be provided by writing to Box 309.

J.A. Selection Completed

Commenting that the quality of the applicants for the position of Junior Advisor was excellent, Dean Carignan announced the appointment of the following Junior Advisors for 1978-1979:

- Sem Aykanian
- Richard Brooks
- Laura Coyle
- Conrad Gaskin
- John Gillespie
- David Greaves
- Deanna Henderson
- Elizabeth Hoskins
- Jim Hopkinson
- Nancy Levit
- Massy March
- Bambi Morgan
- John Stillman
- Jeffrey Walstrom
- Sylvia Small

Each of approximately thirty-five candidates was interviewed by one of two interview sub-committees composed of a member of the Deans' Office, a faculty volunteer who had served as an advisor to Smith residents this year, and current Junior Advisors. Each candidate was given approximately a fifteen minute interview. The interviews occurred after the Selection Committee had discussed criteria and evaluation.

In a lengthy breakfast meeting the two sub-committees came together to make the hard decisions. Dean Carignan said, "It would have been easier if we had had more than fifteen positions to fill; there were clearly more than fifteen qualified applicants. No one likes to turn down qualified applicants."

Although the initial pool of applicants was not as large as they had hoped, Dean Carignan was pleased that when individuals were approached and asked to give the position some thought, they did and most applied. The Dean was quick to comment that, "the rumor that all those who were approached by representatives of the Deans' Office and asked to think about applying were appointed is absolutely false. Some were; some were not. In all cases, the decisions were made in the Selection Committee by consensus."

Both Dean Carignan and Dean Gatto remarked that the interview process had been very reassuring. Dean Carignan said, "one could not come away from this process without having a good feeling about the ability and commitment which exists within the class of 1980."

The remainder of the academic year will find Junior Advisors for next year working with Deans Gatto and Carignan as they prepare for the Class of 1982.

Short Term Plan

The Extra Curricular Activities committee (EAC) on Wednesday March 8th approved the constitution for a Short Term Activities Committee for Short Term 1978. With the support of the Dean of the College's office and several student organizations, the Coordinator of Student Activities presented the constitution of the committee to the EAC in order to more effectively deal with the "differences that exist between the Short Term and the Fall and Winter terms which affect the nature of the Short Term."

"Historically, there has been a significant reduction in the activities sponsored during the Short Term and this has been the source of great concern on the part of many," Dean Carignan commented. One of the goals of the committee is to begin to deal with this problem.

Dean Fitzgerald stated that, "the Short Term is a unique time. The fundamental changes in academic, extra-curricular and social structures seems to have worked against the student organizations operating effectively during this period, if only due to the reduced membership present on campus. I think that the Short Term Activities Committee has the..."

Roger Springarn's editorial in The Student of 20 January 1978 attacks the decision of the Faculty to require 32 courses and 2 STU's as the minimum requirement for the classes of 1982 and thereafter. The editorial discusses the incomparability of STU's and courses, and requires the administration to study the matter. Mr. Springarn deems a considered response. On the other hand, he also illustrates how the debate of complex issues almost inevitably oversimplifies those issues and misrepresents opposing viewpoints. Opposition to 30-3 is not simply illogical and ill-informed at its best, dishonest and numerallar at worst.

1. Three-Course Semesters

Bates has been distinctively liberal in this respect. Students have been permitted to register for as few courses as they wish without special approval. All students now at Bates will retain this privilege. At the moment, no College "nominally 12-18 credit hours," and so on. But is that it not the sole point? Students and Faculty alike see the merits in our relative liberalism. And the Faculty has made it clear that it will not change the policy. Students now being admitted into the class of 1982 will still have liberty to register for the fall of 1978 or the spring of 1982.

Of course, the privilege of choosing three-course semesters does not imply the privilege of amending the basic degree requirement, which is to be made up by a five-course semester or AP credits or summer school or other than direct enrollment. Bates was not distinctive at Bates is the relative liberalism, not the 32-course requirement, which is considered at liberal arts colleges. What will be lost at Bates for future students is the effectiveness of the comparability of STU's into course credits, the 30-3 as the preferred option for 32-2 as the intended standard. This convertability is all but unheard of at other colleges. The exception known to me is Harvard, which requires 35 courses but allows one course credit for each winter term, with 32 credits and 2 STU's. The incomparability of STU's and courses

SENATOR WILLIAM D. HATHAWAY
THE HUMPHREY-HAWKINS BILL & FULL EMPLOYMENT

How to battle the problem of high unemployment rates has been one of Congress' major concerns, particularly in recent years. Double digit inflation rates and the impact of energy prices seem to have taken the toll on market opportunities. When large numbers of employed workers have been laid off, nearly everyone pays the price. For example, studies indicate that excessive unemployment in our country has cost our economy over $600 billion in lost productivity since 1970. That averages out to over $12,000 for the typical family of four.

Another analysis shows that, for every one percent of unemployment, the cost to the government in lost federal, state and local revenue is about $1.6 billion. Employment costs and increased welfare costs is about $20 billion.

It is my belief that unemployment creates any percentage or dollar terms what human costs are involved when the price is tragically high in wasted human potential and the concomitant social ills of alcoholism, drug abuse and neglect. Over the years, a variety of federal programs have been created to help alleviate the problem; public service jobs, manpower training programs, and economic development projects in high unemployment areas. These efforts have helped but not totally succeeded in eliminating our unemployment problems.

One reason for this is that we have not fully coordinated our employment programs with our economic policy and planning activities. The Humphrey-Hawkins bill, now pending in Congress, would help to bridge that coordination gap.

In brief, the Humphrey-Hawkins bill would establish a policy goal reducing overall unemployment rate to four percent by 1981. For all over the age of 20, the adult worker population, would be an unemployment rate of three percent. The legislation contains a needed measure of flexibility with regard to established employment goals. If after three years it becomes apparent that the initial 5 year goal cannot be achieved, adjustments can be made.

The legislation also affirms the right to useful employment paying decent wages for every American able, willing and seeking work. The legislation stipulates this is not the kind of right which allows a person to show off his credentials. The bill mandates that this redefined right be translated into practical reality, through the coordination of planning and implementation of federal programs.

The bill requires the President to make annual proposals to Congress regarding short and long term employment, education and income goals. He would include in these proposals his fiscal and monetary policies and objectives intended to achieve the five year unemployment goals of the legislation.

An additional report would be required of the Federal Reserve, the independent system which serves as the government's central bank and makes important decisions such as interest and lending rate levels which affect the dollar flow in our economy. The Federal Reserve report would consist of its monetary policies and its estimated impact of these policies on inflation and unemployment.

Both of these reports would help provide the needed coordination of our federal government's effort to reduce unemployment rates. It should be noted also that the Humphrey-Hawkins bill stipulates that first priority be directed toward promoting jobs and economic opportunity within the private sector.

The legislation does not create a right to a job, nor does it require expensive new initiatives. But it does recognize the integral role the government and the economy play in the life and the work of every American. It also states the federal government has played and must continue to play to meet our job needs.

As a member of the Senate Employment and Training Subcommittee on Employment, Poverty and Migratory Labor and as a senator representing a state plagued by high unemployment, I am particularly concerned about efforts to reduce unemployment. The Humphrey-Hawkins bill, I hope, will be studied carefully, is no panacea, but provides a needed blueprint for attacking the economic potential of the private and public sectors for maximum job opportunities.

Republican Caucus

At the Lewiston Republican caucus held in February, persons who are active in religious and civic affairs were accepted as delegates to the state convention. Professor Douglas J. Hodgkin of the Government Department was reelected Chairman of the City Committee. Students Herman Bannister and Jules Gagne were re-elected to their positions as Vice-Chairman and Secretary. David Beaulieu received another term as Chairman of Ward One.

Among those who were elected as delegates to the State Convention were Prof. Hodgkin; students Bannister, Beaulieu, Gagne, Mary Smith, Gary Blanchard, and Douglas Payne; and Katherine Stevens, a senior at Lewiston High School. The convention will be held at the Augusta Civic Center, May 19-20.

A few of the major issues remain open, and Chairman Hodgkin was delegated the task of helping to settle these. Persons who wish to attend the convention as alternates and who are interested can contact representatives in Lewiston who should contact him.

The convention will debate, amend, and adopt a platform, hear speeches by out-of-state party leaders, and choose various officers and committee members, including the State Committee. On the lighter side, one will find demonstrations for candidates, social events, and various forms of entertainment.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE? Dis- ville Notch, N.H. is about to become one of the first communities to be completely and partially heated with wood. A boiler will be fueled with wood chips from local logging and pulp mill operations and will power turbines to produce over 30,000 kilowatts of electric power for the local company, a 240-room hotel, a ski area, a country club and the town of Warren itself.

The curious news of the day is the fact that the town of Warren is no longer at the top of the mountain but has moved to the bottom. The old Warren hut, a 20-room hotel and restaurant will be heated entirely with steam.

A strange sight is the white- winged guano. Penelope alpinis, thought to be extinct, has been sighted again by an ornithologist near the summit of the mountain. The guano, a bird slightly larger than a ringneck pheasant, was last seen in 1877. The "rediscovery" took place in northwestern Peru, where Dr. John O'Neill, a Louisiana State University ornithologist, had been conducting research. A veteran area resident told O'Neill that he had seen the birds near his gardens. O'Neill confirmed his find in September, when ten Guans were seen. The Guan population may be in the hundreds.

FIRST SAUDI NATIONAL PARK The National Park Service is in the process of selecting a site in Saudi Arabia in planning that country's first national park. The million-acre expanse of mountainous desert coastline will be known as Asir Kingdom Park in the extreme southern region bordering the Red Sea. The proposed park will be about the same size as Glacier National Park in Montana. The area sports baboons, leopards, jackals and birds of prey. A three-person team from the U.S. will provide technical assistance. On Tuesday, March 7, Rabbi Roger J. Greenberg, spiritual leader of Congregation Beth Abraham of Auburndale, gave the opening prayer in the U.S. House of Representatives.

Rabbi Greenberg has long been active in religious and civic affairs in the Lewiston-Auburn area. In addition, he is serving on the National Advisory Board of Beth Abraham, Rabbi Greenberg serves as the director of speech pathologists at St. Mary's General Hospital in Lewiston. He also serves on the board of many charitable organizations in the State.

I was delighted to be able to arrange for such a distinguished member of the House of Representatives to open the prayer in the House, and I would like to share with you the text of Rabbi Greenberg's inspirational prayer:

Lord, I offer prayer to you, with and through the long line of rabbis in its designated leaders a zeal for justice, a passion for truth and an ultimate goal of peace. May God bless you and may all your blessings and guidance, may these attributes occur in this great nation and in every human being.

May the great sounds of peace, wind, water and nature be heard throughout this land; let them not muffle the sounds of conscience and decency.

With truth in heart and compassion for mankind, may the work of your hands be continually prospered for good so that through your efforts, the United States of America will be more than a title but a grand and glorious way of life.

Amen

False Alarm

On Wednesday, March 15th, at approximately 10:00 p.m., this reporter was notified of the presence of numerous fire engines arriving at Chase Hall.

Upon arrival at the building, it was discovered that the engines had responded as the result of a misunderstanding. There was no fire. Representatives of Wernock Electric (Belfast, Maine) and Edwards Company (Boston, Mass.) explained the situation to the Student. A portion of the fire alarm system had been shut down for approximately one month. This portion controls the alarm signal to the Lewiston Fire Department that sounds in the event of trouble in either Chase Hall or the Library. The internal alarms will still sound, however, within the buildings even when this is shut down. This necessitated to shut the old system down in order to install a modern system in the Chase Hall addition.

Republican Forum

by Rachel Fine

The sun finally shone on the Young Republicans—but at first there were doubts. Last Saturday's Issues Forum, sponsored by the Maine Young Republicans and hosted by the Bates chapter, began in competition with a typical, unexpected March snowstorm. This made the early attendance somewhat sparse.

After introductions by Dana Gallison of Portland, Olympia Snowe, State Senator and Congressional candidate, started the day's activities with a brief address. Her pleasant talk concerned itself with the development of the Republican party and was laced with soft cries for a strong Party. A previous commitment forced Ms. Snowe to cut her stay short, and she left after her address.

Next on the agenda was State Representative Swett Tarbell of Bangor who gave a factual, well-researched presentation on the current status of land claims in the State. He elaborated on the alternatives which many people find unclear: What if the case goes to court? What if the Comanche Settlement is not accepted? This was an informative presentation.

The crowd had increased in size and was attentive as Mr. Tarbell continued his presentation. The opportunity to hear elected officials speak on such subjects was a valuable one. It afforded an exclusive opportunity to see how they express themselves and to what types of issues they give priority. The Young Republicans were able to get a larger number of elected officials and candidates to attend this function. In addition to Ms. Snowe, Mr. Tarbell, and Mr. Emery, Congressman William Cohen gave an address during the course of the day, and the three Republican contenders for their party's gubernatorial nomination (Unwood Palmer, Jerrold Speers, and Charlie Gagnon) were in attendance. The three debated in the afternoon.

The day's activities included two sets of hour-long issue seminars, each of which contained three simultaneous seminars in different locations in Chase Hall. These were attended by experts in various fields, including State Representatives and Senators, the State Commissioner of Human Services, the Legal Council for the Maine Republic, the State Department, and the Maine Young Republicans—both at first there were doubts. The Bates Student, March 17, 1978

by Jim Curtin & Karen Flurczak

Armin H. Meyer, retired senior diplomat and visiting speaker under the Woodrow Wilson fellowship program was kind enough to grant an exclusive interview to the Bates STUDENT. The interview was conducted March 14, 1978 during a luncheon meeting with Mr. Meyer.

Ambassador Meyer was born on Jan. 19, 1914 in Indiana. His education included a B.A. from Capital University and a Master of Arts (Mathematics) at Ohio State. While pursuing his doctorate in education, World War II interrupted and ended his educational advancement and he was stationed in Eritrea, Ethiopia as a radio operator. After the war he volunteered for the foreign service, which suddenly noticed men for the post war, non isolationist world. During the next 15 years, he worked on various programs, including operations in Baghdad, Beirut, Kabul, and Washington. In 1965, President Kennedy appointed Ambassador Meyer to the position of Ambassador to Lebanon, and in 1969, President Nixon transferred him to the position of Ambassador to Iran and, finally, in 1980 President Nixon appointed him to the ambassadorship of Japan.

In 1978 Ambassador Meyer retired at the age of 50, after having spent his last year in the diplomatic service in Washington as special consultant in South Asian affairs and as chairman of the working committee of the Cabinet Committee to Combat Terrorism. Since his retirement, he has written one book, "Assignment Tokyo—An Ambassador's Journal," taught, and lectured throughout the country.

The following is a collection of paragraphs from the STUDENT'S interview:

Q—Should Israel give back the land they conquered in the wars against the Arabs?
A—According to the previous UN agreement, Israel has already committed itself to withdraw. It would be foolish to try to hold a land with a predominantly Arab population.

Q—How should Israel withdraw its present borders?
A—It doesn't seem to matter; in this war guerrilla tactics supercede boundaries. Israel did not need the West Bank until it occupied the West Bank; the same is true for Sinai.

Q—Do you think there will ever be peace in the Middle East?
A—No. I think the situation there will never be resolved. The feelings on both sides are too strong. The Israelis will never give up; the Arabs outlasted the crusades 1000 years, the Turks 200 years, and the British 200 years—they feel they will outlast the Israelis.

Q—What do you see Iran's role to be in the Middle East?
A—Iran could play either a very helpful role or a very detrimental role. Their army is highly sophisticated and large enough to tip the balance in the Middle East. They have the ability to stabilize small revolutions in oil-rich principalities. On the other hand, they also have the ability to cut off all oil flow to the United States.

Q—What do you think of the American media coverage of the Middle East crisis?
A—The American media news is shaping the opinions of the American public—which in turn tells the American media what the American public will see and hear; the present only a hook up to the 'front line'. The educated American will look to different sources and different opinions and then formulate his own; it worries me, however, that the American who reads only one source take it as the gospel truth and will not be able to see the bias.

Q—What do you think of the CIA investigations?
A—CIA investigations? Where would the American public be if the American who reads only one source take it as the gospel truth and will not be able to see the bias.

It is hoped that this chart will be of some help to you in your search for a room. The thought behind it was that you would very quickly be able to see how many rooms are available and where AND, perhaps, more importantly, to provide an indication of your chances of getting a room in a particular residence (based upon this year's class breakdown). We realize that this does not contain all of the information necessary for choosing a room, but this is because if you are going to live in a room for an entire year, you should visit the house or dorm to get a feel for what it is like. This will merely serve as a guide in where to begin. Thanks go to the following people for their help in compiling this chart: Sara Garrison, Donna James, Ann Keenan, and Frank Ficarra.

LOTTERY NUMBERS

Numbers will be randomly assigned and posted on the following dates:

| 79 Sophomores Saturday, March 18th |
| '80 Juniors Tuesday, March 21st |
| '81 Sophomores Wednesday, March 22nd |

To find out your lottery number, you can:

a.) check the posted list in Chase Hall.
b.) call the Concierge.
c.) listen to WJB.

If you are a three-year or three and a half-year student, make sure to check with Dean Reese immediately to find out your lottery status.

If you are drawing a room for someone who is presently JYA, please notify Dean Reese at once.

If you are certain that you are going JYA, there is no need to pick a room. However, if notification for JYA has not been made prior to the lottery, follow standard lottery procedures. The Lottery will be held at 7:00 p.m. in Fiske Lounge.

Roommate Assistance

Roommate assistance is available through Dean Reese. People without roommates may pick up roommate preference forms at his office. This should be done as soon as possible. Before the Lottery

Look around at as many dorms as you can. Are they the same furniture as the odd-numbered rooms overlooking the puddle are considered better than others across the hall. All of the rooms have pipes on the ceiling, which some may get noisy and the heat is at times hard to control.

For each person living in the odd-numbered rooms there is a bed with a boxspring and a mattress, a desk with drawers and a chair (the desk has no book shelves on it), a lounge chair, a built-in wooden closet with sliding doors and a shoe rack, a medicine cabinet with a mirror on a cork bulletin board. The rooms also include one built in bookcase, a dresser towel racks, and large windows.

There are few differences in the even numbered rooms. They have one movable wooden bookcase, a steel movable closet for each person and small windows near the ceiling.

The laundry room for the whole dorm is large and has 6 sinks, 4 washers, 4 dryers, a clothesline, a soda machine and an ironing board. There is a large closet, open rooms, one of them big enough for bikes, tracks even a canoe. The first floor lounge is next to the laundry and has a kitchen with an oven, stove, cabinets and a refrigerator, 3 couches and 3 small tables with chairs. The second floor rooms all have large sized windows, a desk with drawers but without book shelves, a chair, medicine cabinet with a mirror on cork board, built-in wooden closets with shoe racks, lounge chairs and one built in bookcase. The floor consists of four rooms, the odd numbered rooms have a bunk bed and a single bed, only two closets,105, 106, 107, 108, 205, 206, 207, 208. They have pipes on the ceiling, puddle are considered better than others across the hall. All of the rooms have pipes on the ceiling, which some may get noisy and the heat is at times hard to control.

Good News to Ponder

Those unhappy with their choice of a room may sign up on a waiting list in Dean Reese's office, taking the chance that a "better" room will open up. As a general rule, several rooms on campus "open up" before the beginning of the fall semester. This list is followed closely, so it is to your advantage to sign up if you are unhappy with your lottery choice. The list will be open to sign-ups on April 3rd.

J.B. NEWS

J.B. probably will not be advisable this year due to red tape. Count on J.B. being the same next year.

The New House

The new house across from Small House on College Street will be similar to Page house but will have a basement. It will have two nice lounges and be carpeted throughout.

Good News to Ponder

If you stop to think about it, there will be more choice rooms available this year since there will be half as many rooms allocated for provost and provost's choice.

Freshman Interaction

By Frank Ficarra

Next year, Page Hall will house freshman only on the third floor. The first, second and fourth floors will be up for grabs in the rooming lottery. Since Page will be the only residence where interaction is planned for freshmen and upperclassmen, following is a description of the Hall for those of you who would like to take part in this new situation. The dorm is coed randomly by room and has wall to wall carpeting in all the hallways.

On the first floor, the odd numbered rooms over looking the puddle are considered better than others across the hall. All of the rooms have pipes on the ceiling, which some may get noisy and the heat is at times hard to control.

For each person living in the odd-numbered rooms there is a bed with a boxspring and a mattress, a desk with drawers and a chair (the desk has no book shelves on it), a lounge chair, a built-in wooden closet with sliding doors and a shoe rack, a medicine cabinet with a mirror on a cork bulletin board. The rooms also include one built in bookcase, a dresser towel racks, and large windows.

There are few differences in the even numbered rooms. They have one movable wooden bookcase, a steel movable closet for each person and small windows near the ceiling.

The laundry room for the whole dorm is large and has 6 sinks, 4 washers, 4 dryers, a clothesline, a soda machine and an ironing board. There is a large closet, open rooms, one of them big enough for bikes, tracks even a canoe. The first floor lounge is next to the laundry and has a kitchen with an oven, stove, cabinets and a refrigerator, 3 couches and 3 small tables with chairs. The second floor rooms all have large sized windows, a desk with drawers but without book shelves, a chair, medicine cabinet with a mirror on cork board, built-in wooden closets with shoe racks, lounge chairs and one built in bookcase. The floor consists of four rooms, the odd numbered rooms have a bunk bed and a single bed, only two closets, 105, 106, 107, 108, 205, 206, 207, 208. They have pipes on the ceiling, puddle are considered better than others across the hall. All of the rooms have pipes on the ceiling, which some may get noisy and the heat is at times hard to control.

Good News to Ponder

Those unhappy with their choice of a room may sign up on a waiting list in Dean Reese's office, taking the chance that a "better" room will open up. As a general rule, several rooms on campus "open up" before the beginning of the fall semester. This list is followed closely, so it is to your advantage to sign up if you are unhappy with your lottery choice. The list will be open to sign-ups on April 3rd.

J.B. NEWS

Contrary to popular belief, J.B. probably will not be advisable this year due to red tape. Count on J.B. being the same next year.

The New House

The new house across from Small House on College Street will be similar to Page house but will have a basement. It will have two nice lounges and be carpeted throughout.

New Professor In Economics - Mary McNally

This week the "Student" interviewed Prof. Mary McNally, who is an Assistant Professor of Economics. She is currently teaching Introductory Economics (Econ 348) and Urban Economics (Econ 349). For some background information, Prof. McNally received her B.A. at George Washington University (a hometown school), majoring in Economics. After that she worked for a while in regional economic analysis, in the Dept. of Commerce in Washington, D.C. Later, having moved to Hartford, Ct. with her husband, she went on to graduate work at the University of Connecticut. In 1968 she obtained her M.A. in Economics, and in 1976 her Ph.D. both at the University of Connecticut. Since working in the Dept. of Commerce, Prof. McNally has been interested in quantita tive methods and mathematical economics, especially in urban and regional subjects. However, she did her dissertation on the Theory of Economic growth. Specifically, her dissertation included theoretical examination of the nature of economic policy required to move an economy such as the United States into an optimal growth path. (This is concerned with higher rates of investments as a percentage of the GNP than the United States has now. The policy needed to reach this high investment tends to take from the poor and give to the rich, so it isn't all that optimal.)

Prof. McNally has previously taught in several places. Her first teaching experience consisted of being a part-time lecturer at the University of Connecticut. Also, when a graduate student, she was an instructor in "Principles, Money and Banking" at the same school. After grad school, Prof. McNally taught at Trinity College for a year and a half, teaching Urban Economics, Principles, Mathematical Economics, and a Seminar in Regional Economics. She then taught for a year at Holyoke Community College. Prof. McNally has several interesting features, including the absence of any electronic means of supplying the piping air. This means that an assistant pump air throughout the performance. McNally has only the same pump at 1 p.m. on March 14. It is the first in a series of eight programs with Anderson that will be aired over Maine Public Radio (MPBN) taped the perfor mations, "Shaping the City," series, which consists of a series of speakers from Lewiston and Auburn addressing themselves to ques tions of urban interests.

Prof. McNally has many other interests which she enjoys in her spare time. She is an advisor to the Oruting Club, and went on several trips last fall. During this winter, she has gone to Sugadafort many times where she is a candidate for the ski patrol. Being a member of the ski patrol involves knowing first aid, having CPR training, toboggan training, becoming familiar with the moun tain, and being familiar with rescue procedures. Professor McNally has been keeping in shape for the ski patrol by doing some running and weight work. She says that she just pi the two-hundred pound man with a broken leg at the top of the hardest ski slope, and that gave her the incentive to keep lifting the weights. She likes to ski and hike with her husband and son, Michael, who's in the first grade. Furthermore, occasional get together with friends, including Prof. Francis, to "make music" are another favorite ac tivity. They usually play folk music, with Prof. McNally playing the flute.

The professional goals of Prof. McNally are, firstly, all, to be a good teacher. She defines a good teacher as one who is able to teach well, direct students in research effectively, and do her own research. She considers it important for a person working with students to be "an interest ing intellectual academic charac ter who sets an example", so keeping up in research is an important aspect of that. Also, Prof. McNally hopes to be able to contribute to economic thought, though she admits this is very ambitious.

In deciding to come to Bates, Prof. McNally states that she liked Bates because "it is a liberal arts college that caters to better than average students and because the kind of things I know about economics are important for peo ple who are going into business administration." Prof. McNally likes Bates a lot. She finds "it is straightforward hard working group of faculty and students and a lot of communication with people in different departments. I can learn about disciplines other than my own and there's enough of an intellectual atmosphere so people can talk about what they're working on, and that I like." Mrs. McNally works with Prof. McNally. She and her husband wanted to settle in Northern New England some time in the next two years or so, and both snow and mountains. Also, she likes being away from a very big city, regarding it as "maybe I'm not the one to make the difference, I like having the idea that what one person does, does matter." She feels this is possible both at Bates and in Lewiston.

As for impressions of Bates students, Prof. McNally says "the students are bright and I find it hard to keep up with you all." She also says that "students these days seem to be working not so much because they want to learn something, but to get a good grade to go on to grad school. I wish they could relax a little and enjoy working."

The vocals were consistently excellent, though, and every word could be understood over the P.A.

The show finished a little after 11 P.M., at which time the drummer spoke for some twenty minutes. The audience by this time was beginning to thin considerably, and it is understandable that many who stayed found this last talk a bit too long. Joshua had given people something to think about, however, and that seemed to be a primary goal for the group.

Having spoken to members of the band before the concert I was disappointed the evening hadn’t gone better. They definitely were sincere and had an extremely important message to convey. It’s too bad they couldn’t let the music speak for them and just forget a set the skins, which seemed to alienate people; the concert marked the first time funding had been made available for such an event, which was good for the public. Hopefully it won’t be the last, with a little more planning there could be some fine concerts put on.

AREN'T WE A LITTLE OLD FOR AVOIDING WHAT'S GOOD FOR US?

By Douglas C. Sensenig

The importance of a poetry reading lies in two areas: the importance of the voice of the poet and the importance of the poetry he reads. If you missed the reading by Michael Harper you missed his voice and poetry, neither of which I have the ability or the space to recreate. In a way, I don't think I would want to do so even if I could. I would not want you to have any incentive whatsoever to miss another poetry reading and read the review afterward to give yourself the idea that you are an active thinker. You know as well as I do that a person is better than anything which can be written about him, so it is our failure when we give up the opportunity to hear and see a person in exchange for second-hand information about him.

It seems strange to me that the poetry reading was so sparsely attended when we are supposed to be one of the better groups of students in the country. Perhaps Bobcats male and female are preponderantly interested in QPR instead of QFD Quality Development of the SFH. How can you know what is deep inside us all if we do not take the time to stop and think, to talk in the woods, to listen to the poem. How cleverly we hinder our search for ourselves!

Poetry classics are "re-touched," to everything we do. It tells a lot about the way we move and the way we think. We look for it when we study Chemistry because we look for the deepest and most simple levels of matter and the infinite patterns of molecular variation around us. We look for it in the leaf or the cell when we study Biology. We may call poetry different names to reconcile it with our prejudices, but we all (and who will say we are not?) are trying to find simple meaning in the world which is as much inside us as outside of us.

It is not trying to sound patronizing or "preachy." I present what I believe in others. I am lazy and often unwilling to move myself in the direction of my betterment. What we must do is see in this laziness for what it is and get rid of it as best we can.

What is this laziness? At Bates and in myself I see this laziness caused to a large degree by our society which stresses nothing but nothing. It does not stress individually or even improve oneself on any plane, except possibly a greater improvement in the ability to consume.

We are not invisible, as our cyniciasts illustrate. We give up our feeling of being taken by everyone in exchange for talking ourselves. We do not trust the sincerity of others because we fact it in ourselves, we lock ourselves further away from understanding while comforting ourselves with the knowledge that we are right. Perhaps this has continued on page 15.

I'm sure you know what I mean. Thou are few giggles, let alone laughs, in this movie and I really can't understand why it was made. Comedy is so bad that even in a special interest in each new contender that is released. But this movie is so dreadful that not even that can save it. One can understand the offense people feel when an insensitive man like Brooks works in the same medium as Chaplin, Fields, and Laurel and Hardy.

Next time, Mel, stick to the level that you've been working on—Mad magazine or lower.

The British rock scene is very different from the American panorama. Economic ties are different—people here listen to Tom Travolta, disco, Bee Gees. It's too bad."

High Anxiety is a movie by Mel Brooks.

High Anxiety portrays to be a satire of Alfred Hitchcock's thrillers. Actually, the only suspense is the quickness of the audience to get the hell out of the theater as soon as possible. Never have I been so disgusted with a movie comedy, not even the reprehensible its A Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World. Mel Brooks is a talented man who is determined to work well below his level. With High Anxiety, he has reached the nadir of his career.

What we have here is a collection of tired Catalin Critch comedy situations, usually played in the living room. If your idea of big yucks is having excretion referred to repeatedly as "cuckadodee," then this is your type of film. Or, if tedious scene parodies of Hitchcock classics appeal to you—like having the birds that chase Rod Taylor, in the movie of the same name, excrete on him rather than peck away. Or see Harvey Korman playing his swashbuckler deviant from Blazing Saddles in a fashion even more obsessional than before.

We have known deep inside us all along if we do not take the time to stop and think, to talk in the woods, to listen to the poem. How cleverly we hinder our search for ourselves!

Finally, coming up in the more distant future are two cultural events. On March 22 there will be a Concert Lecture Series with the winners of the Portland Symphony Orchestra competition. It will be held in Chase Hall Lounge and there will be no cost. On March 23, there will be held in Schaeffer Theatre the Spring Modern Dance Concert. Admission will be charged.
Wonderlust

Wonderlust arrived at one conclusion, after three months of travel in Europe. A woman has it made, hands down. You never see a woman stranded on a highway hitchhiking, or paying for her own meals and drinks in café’s and clubhouses. Yes, Europe is definitely a paradise for the clever, good-looking female. Wonderlust’s thoughts drifted back to his secretary situation, waiting for over four hours for a lift. He was on the verge of trading his masculinity for a bikini bathing suit. Fate, that old, occasionally benevolent intangible, once again provided for Wonderlust, a beaten-up Ford van pulled over. After introductions and some small talk, Wonderlust proceeded to divulge his earlier thoughts to this very pretty Australian girl who had picked him up.

Felicity, at first as happy as her name implies, listened attentively as Wonderlust raged on about the obvious traveling advantages of the fairer sex. Then—to his surprise, Felicity forcefully said, “I don’t agree with you.” “Do you think it is enjoyable to be treated and pawed and followed by Italian men?” “Do you think women enjoy the Arabs, who treat us like captives, believing every woman is his property, to be used and abused as his whims desire?” “Why, I’ve only met them half, she shouted,” “after the lecherous gazes of old men in Amsterdam. That should cut my hair, and go about incognito as an eccentric male professor.” “And furthermore—we women have to be constantly wary of the white women slave trade.”

The white women slave trade. Wonderlust repeated dubiously, “You must explain.

Alternate Careers & Lifestyles

A colloquium on “Alternate Careers and Lifestyles” will be held at Bates College Mar. 17-18. Featured among the 18 guests are James Levine, author of “Who Shall Raise the Children,” and Dr. Myra Rowe, economist and special assistant to the president and chancellor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. Rowe will deliver the keynote address at 7 p.m. Friday, Mar. 17, which will be followed by a reception. Levine will speak at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Mar. 18, following day-long workshops. All events will be held at Chase hall and the public is invited without charge.

Workshop leaders include the Rev. Elizabeth Ann Habecker, who recently became the first woman priest in the Episcopal Diocese of Maine. She and her husband, the Rev. John Christian Habecker, began their joint ministry at St. Ann’s Episcopal Church in South Windham in December.

Topics will include “Being Single and Having a Career,” “Living Together—How Do You Decide,” “Two Career Families—Success and Compromises,” and “Liberating Husbands and Non-Traditional Careers.”

The conference is presented by Women’s Awareness, the psychology department, and the office of career counseling. It is funded by the Goldston Award, named for the late Eli Goldston, prominent Boston civic leader.

The purpose of the colloquium is to help people, particularly college undergraduates, become more aware of the issues of career choice and lifestyle interrelate,” explained Dr. Rowe.

Wonderlust Encounters that “Peculiar Institution”

The white women slave trade. Wonderlust said “is alive and kicking and consigned to all the major port cities in Europe.” “My own friend Natalie,” she continued, “talked into an ostensibly reputable import-export shop in Marseilles, to wake up bound and gagged with ten other white female slaves down in the basement.” “These damsels in distress had apparently been dragged, dragged downstairs, bound and gagged—and were awaiting a ship to transport them to some Arab country, where they would live out their days in toil.”

“I have spoken British gentlemen, lost his wife in that shop, and demanded the police search it, otherwise those women would have been gone forever.”

Wonderlust just sat there, incredulous, and decided he would swap the minor advantages of femininity for his freedom any day.
proposals. Consequently, the information with regard to the committee felt the need for more developed. Throughout the presentation of a Bates College ID area. I don’t like to think that our own students are responsible for this damage. Certainly some of this damage is due to outsiders in the building.

The second reason for the change deals with the issue of outsiders in the building. “This has been a consistent problem in Chase Hall. Our policy is that non-Bates students may use college facilities as guests of students or other college personnel such as the little brother, little sister program. However, we find non-students loitering in Chase Hall constantly. I feel that by limiting access to equipment solely to Bates students, we will reduce presence of non-students.”

Damage in Chase Hall this year has been on the upswing most frequently occurring in the bathrooms and the pool area. The Dean asked the cooperation of all New Pool Policy proposals in the fall, those proposals presented to the committee in the spring will benefit from the opportunity to revise the proposal and provide additional information in response to committee recommendations. Further, the committee will look favorably on the advance planning which a spring submission indicates.

The deadline for submitting proposals for spring review will be March 24th. Proposals should be left in the CSA office.

Admissions
The “Student” recently spoke with Dean Ralph Davis, Dean of Admissions about the trends in application to college. The result of this conversation was a pleasant surprise. While application to many small New England private colleges is going down, Bates experienced a record high application level this year with 5 percent more applications than last year's record high.

There will be approximately four hundred twenty accepted for the Fall semester plus about thirty transfer students. This number is relatively unchanged from last year. Seventy-five of these incoming freshmen were accepted early decision to Bates, a number of which is also an increase over last year’s fifty-five.

It seems that there is an increased interest in Bates College as opposed to other New England colleges in the last few years. Presently, approximately one in every eight is accepted by Bates for admission.
Exciting Basketball

If performances during the 1977-78 season are any indication, exciting women's basketball action will be the rule this weekend when Bates College hosts the EIAW Region I-A Invitational Tournament at Alumni Gymnasium.

Six top small college teams will compete for top honors in the tournament, which will begin Sunday morning (March 19) and end with the championship game Monday (March 20) at 8 p.m.

Top seed in the tournament is St. John Fisher, which is led by junior forward Sue Doliner (18 points per game) and sophomore center Stacey Brodzik (15 rebounds per game).

Junior Robin King, Husson, currently 7-3, has to its credit a pair of wins over defending Maine "B" division champion Colby and a single victory over Bates. The Braves leading point-getter is sophomore forward Kris Hough (15.7 ppg), while Betsy Margeson leads in rebounding with a 12.1 average.

Boston University, the champion of New Jersey's AIAW Division III, will bring a 9-1 record into the tournament. The Scarlet Raiders' top performer is freshman Karen Edwards, who is averaging 15.7 points and 9.4 rebounds per contest.

Rutgers-Newark, the champion of New York AIAW, with a 12.3 average.

Bates, 7-10 going into Tuesday's (March 14) game with Bowdoin, is led in both scoring and rebounding by senior forward Cathy Faveran. The Bobcats will also rely heavily on the outside shooting of freshman guard Sue Doliner, who is second in scoring with an 11.4 average.

Tickets for the tournament, priced at $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for students, are available either in advance at the Bates College Athletic Department, or at the door on the day of the games.

Collegiate Ski Weekend

Sugarloaf/USA is hosting the 1978 Collegiate Ski Challenge as part of their first annual Collegiate Spring Weekend, April 8th and 9th. The Ski Challenge is a dual format NASTAR race. Teams from any colleges are welcome to enter the field.

The Ski Challenge is only one of the activities planned for this fun-filled weekend. On Saturday, the finals of the Great Ski New England Pro Classic will be held. Top Eastern pros will be completing the second and final day of competition for a 1978 diesel-powered Peugeot. From 4 to 6 p.m., there will be an outdoor concert by the Boston-based group the "S scorers," and a frisbee contest on the Bunny Slope in front of Sugarloaf's base lodge. This will be followed by an outdoor barbecue.

Saturday evening, the S scorers" will return for an evening of dancing in the base lodge at the Village. Sunday morning Peugeot will sponsor a Pole, Pneumaball, Peddi and Paddle race. This event is made up of four continuous parts: a ski race, a foot race, a bike race and a canoe race. First place prizes for both the individual men's and women's division are mopeded.

Skiers Go To Nationals

Bates has much reason to be proud of its ski team, to their recent performance in national competition for the women's team. Nancy Ingersoll qualified for the Association of International Athletes for Women National Championships in cross-country skiing. The competition was held at Angel's Fire, New Mexico. The host university was the University of New Mexico. Skiing with other college students of national caliber, Nancy finished third in the slalom. In the giant slalom, Rodriguez took 25th. As well, Rodriguez finished 19th in jumping. John Fitz qualified for competition in the slalom. Fitz took 18th in the event giving five points for Bates. In the cross-country event, Bates' representative was Todd Webber. Webber turned in a 36th place finish for Bates.

In recognition of the outstanding performance of the Bates College Ski Team in national competition, the Student would like to designate the four skiers above as Athletes of the Week. Not only are the individual records of these skiers impressive, but their boost to the ski team has been difficult to measure. In addition of giving credit where credit is due, the Student awards honors to Nancy Ingersoll, Zane Rodriguez, John Fitz, and Todd Webber.

Athlete of the Week ???

We of the intramural sports world here at Bates College would like to nominate a member of our own for that coveted award, "Athlete of the Week." There is one among us who has shown above all the rest; he is Milliken House's Dave Freedman. A few weeks ago, Dave put on a basketball performance that remains unmatched in Alumni Gymnasium. Although it was apparent that Dave was up for this game, there was little indication of the great things to come. Along with playing a great floor game, Dave pumped in 60 points. In the final moments, he drove past Milliken House great Jeff Ashmont and Sam Peluso and threw in a soft jumper over the outstretched hand of his opponent.

Stunned, the crowd sat silently for a moment and then swarmed the court to tell us the man of the hour had arrived. Attempts to retire Dave's shirt were frustrated by the fact that he played for the "skin" team. The treasured ball was not rescued from the trophy case in which it belonged because Dave's D in the world here at Bates College Athletic Department, or awarded the Heisman Trophy of the Bates College sporting world—"The Athlete of the Week."

Sportingly yours, The Men of Milliken

Second place prizes are 10 speed Peugeot bikes, with other special prizes for the college team divisions.

Sunday afternoon its the Collegiate Ski Challenge to determine the best skiing campus in the East. A sophisticated NASTAR handicap system will be used to handicap racers to give all skiers an even chance to help their team. It is hoped that fraternities, sororities, dorms and various campus groups will form teams. Registration will be held in the lobby.

To enhance this weekend, Sugarloaf is offering two nights in of freshman guard Sue Doliner, who is second in scoring with an 11.4 average. Tickets for the tournament, priced at $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for students, are available either in advance at the Bates College Athletic Department, or at the door on the day of the games.

THE OLD MAN IS SMILING

by Carol Frey

There's good news for the 'Old Man of the Mountain'—tourists visiting New Hampshire and highway builders—and environmentalists! A revolutionary compromise will result in the completion of a major traffic route through Franconia Notch State Park without severe damage to the park itself, a controversial subject for the past 20 years.
College each placed two players on the annual C.B.B. (Colby-Bates-Bowdoin) Conference All-Star Basketball Team, it was announced today.

Conference champion Colby placed forward Paul Harvey and Bowdoin's representative on the new team recorded forward forward Greg Fasulo.

Harvey, a senior from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, finished the 1977-78 season with a total of 548 points, an average of 22.8 points for a 14.4 average. The South Windsor, Connecticut resident also led the Mules in rebounding with a total of 517 points in his freshman season. A native of New Hampshire, Harvey, a senior resident also brought down 170 rebounds for a 7.4 average.

Goodwin, Bates' ninth 1000-point scorer, finished his senior season with a total of 548 points, an average of 22.8 points for a 14.4 average. The South Windsor, Connecticut resident also completed a string of twenty-nine consecutive free throws during the recently-completed season. Ruffin, who finished only two points behind Goodwin with a total of 548 and a 17.3 average, is a native of New York City. Among the highlights of the season for the senior guard-forward was a last second basket which gave the Bobcats a win over Bowdoin.

Fasulo, who passed Bo McFarland as the Polar Bears' all-time leading scorer this season, scored 469 points for a 24.7 average in his senior year. The Nashua, New Hampshire resident also brought down 170 rebounds for a 7.4 average. Of the five players on this year's C.B.B. squad, three were named to the All-New England team of the National Association of Basketball Coaches as well. Fasulo and Harvey were first-team picks, while Goodwin was named to the second team. Colby won the 1977-78 C.B.B. title, finishing with a 3-1 record in Conference play. Bates was second at 2-2; and Bowdoin third at 1-3.

Lacrosse Clinic

Bates College will sponsor a clinic for persons interested in women's lacrosse officiating this Saturday (March 18) in Alumni Gymnasium.

The clinic, which is open to both men and women, will begin at 9:30 a.m. with a seminar on rules interpretation. A practice session, featuring a scrimmage between members of the Bates women's team, will follow at noon in the Clifton Daggett Gym Cage. The clinic is scheduled to end at 2 p.m.

Patricia Smith, coach of the Bates team and clinic coordinator, notes that the session is open to all interested parties, "both experienced officials and newcomers who would like to become officials." Coach Smith adds that "the continuing growth of women's lacrosse in Maine on both the high school and college levels has resulted in a need for more officials. We hope that anyone who has considered the possibility of officiating will take advantage of the clinic, and that veteran officials will take the opportunity to get ready for the coming season."
out that we consider a deer or a rabbit to be alive, but a rock or thing is a thing. In opposition, an innovation.

There were several questions asked of him, including one from Professor Hepburn and Deiman of the Bates English Department. In answering one question (second one above two), he pointed out that "Deconstructionism," which appears to be a form of practical study—using the methods that apply best to the text to analyse it may be used interdisciplinarily to "four or five other" subjects. In answer to Hepburn's question about Wordsworth's poetry, he said, "You might say, "then, that Wordsworth's great fascination is that his poems treat the same point, differing not just in words, but more by being permutations of the same idea. In reply to Deiman's questioning, he said that he felt that the Literary Study could and should be taught to graduate and undergraduate students. His presentation was warmly received by his large audience. The program was well attended by both students and faculty.

administration, which determines policy, fails to give those employed elsewhere a policy function at a push? How can a quality rapport between the administration and the staff be achieved, an ever-living basis to institutional growth, with poor receptiveness to employee concerns? As a student I am not pleased with the fee increase for next year. I am, however, so disillusioned and dismayed with the manner in which the Trustees' Budget Committee is acting as "to hold the line." We all make due with increased costs, the College included, because we have to. But, when in the process of establishing a means to run the College in lieu of increased costs, the College places the pertinacity of the institution above the welfare and performance of the individuals which make it work clearly the College is in the wrong. President Reynolds' memo and the point of the Budget Committee serve as a further step advancing the erosion of my confidence in, and the equivocity, of the Bates College administration.

The promotion is gone, so are the standards. The one problem with this fallacy is that his poems resists analysis by some physical exterior influence: economic, physical, emotional, conscious (cogito), or something else.

As he began the second half, in which Wordsworth's poem figured, he created a dialogue with us. He pointed out that he cannot pronounce "thing" as it is spelled, but rather as "thing," a pronunciation that a dialectician who could place someone's place of origin "anywhere in Baltimore" (Shaw's Pygmalion?) told him he came from the hills of Virginia, where in fact Professor Miller's father came from.

I had no human fears: I seemed to think a thing that could not feel nomination has she now, no more;

She neither hears nor

Rolled round in earth's diurnal course,

With rocks, and stones,

and trees.

The above is the text of Wordsworth's "A Slumber Did My Spirit Seal." (1799). Professor Miller first said that the poem resists analysis by some physical exterior influence: economic, physical, emotional, conscious (cogito), or something else. Polly will arrive in London on March 17th, 2028, and will be available for interviews and speaking engagements. Be sure to book your trip early to secure your spot on this exclusive tour.

Short Term
potential to remedy this problem by equalizing the responsibility for activities during Short Term. However, I don’t really see it connecting with organizations or jeopardizing their autonomy. The idea is to separate the programming from the allocative responsibilities within the present structures. We are saying to organizations very emphatically that they should and indeed must continue regular programming, but the Short Term is to be successful. The committee would support efforts which emanated from outside the organizational structure.

The committee will be comprised of representatives of the organizations which contribute funds to the budget of the committee. Further, the committee would have two faculty members with the coordinator or assistant as ex officio chairperson. The responsibility of the committee is new governance, as opposed to the validation and degree of funding.

"This structure, similar to the RA Board of Directors or the Goldstein Award, will support the creative programming of the student community, in a concerted effort. I foresee the committee, in many ways, shaping the nature of this Short Term. We haven’t precluded support, financial or otherwise, from any source in order to make this structure more effective. I would hope that we could count on a budget of about $2,000," commented Dean Fitzgerald.

The committee will begin meeting after the membership is established to develop by-laws and goals as well as to consider programs taking place within the first several weeks.

Commentary
something to do with the lack of attendance at cultural functions at Bates. Are we afraid of those who can express their beauty? Let’s not make excuses for ourselves by attaching names to our failings. "I’m lazy or "I’m schizophrenic" brings one no closer to improvement. Art is for your sake. You are the art and the artist. Express yourself write. Understand your need for the wisdom of others which will reveal your wisdom by going to poetry readings and recitals, there is little time for complacency.

Anderson
Concerts abound include King’s College at Cambridge and Coventry Cathedral, both in England. In addition to his work at Bates College, Anderson is the organist and choirmaster at the Cathedral of St. Luke in Portland.

Congratulations!

Now what?
You can work $9/5 to 5 for the main, or you can work $9/5 to 9 for the night. The PEACE Corps and VISTA offer you a unique opportunity to enrich your college experience and help shape the future. You can live in a new land, speak a new language, and be absorbed in a new perspective of the world.

The PEACE Corps and VISTA are the perfect complement to your college years. Both programs offer valuable life experiences that will stay with you long after you leave campus. You will gain confidence, learn new skills, and make lasting friendships.

If you’re interested in learning more about the PEACE Corps or VISTA, please visit the Peace Corps or VISTA offices on campus. There you can find out more about the programs, the requirements, and the application process.

The Peace Corps and VISTA recruiters will be conducting interviews with interested students on Thursday, March 23rd in the Placement Office.

COME IN AND DISCUSS YOUR FUTURE. WE’LL SHOW YOU HOW TO USE YOUR DIPLOMA.

ever, when they failed to arrive. Mr. Sherrick granted Nancy a personal interview. Topics dis- cussed were the budget process, justification for the Defense Budget, and public attitudes toward the budget.

Upon leaving the Pentagon, Nancy proceeded directly to the Hubert Humphrey Building back in Washington for a group meet- ing with Ms. Eileen Shanahan, Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs for H.W. Approximately twenty of the editors participat- ing in the conference attended this meeting at which topics such as: "what people don’t know about Joseph Califano." HEW’s recently launched study of con- sumers of St. Luke in Portland.

Wurfel elaborated on Bario’s speech of future plans and policy over the last year. He also made an extremely candid presentation, humorous and informative talk on the Carter administration. In an extremely candid presentation, Rubenstein outlined the suc- cesses and failures of domestic policy over the last year. He also spoke of future plans and priorities of the HEW and the administration.

At the conclusion of another break (during which the con- ference participants inspected), the Secret Service sweep and con- trol of St. Luke in Portland.

At the conclusion of another break (during which the con- ference participants inspected), the Secret Service sweep and con- trol of HEW, and the introduction of Midge Schuker’s speech was cut short by result of a shortage of, time, Ms. Jill Schuker. Special Assistant to the President for Public Affairs Director for the Public Affairs for the N.W. to conduct a personal interview. Topics discussed were the budget process, justification for the Defense Budget, and public attitudes toward the budget.

Tired Turner (Director of the Department of Energy) was presently in California). Mr. Wurfel proceeded to the Southwest Gate of the White House where he and four other published editors were met by a vehicle that transported them to CIA headquarters in Virginia. At a meeting in the Joint Chiefs of Staff conference room, the editors spoke with James King (academic co-chair of the group) (Director of Public Affairs), Dennis Berend, and Dale Peterson. Shortly after the infor- mation discussion began, Admiral Stanfield Turner (Director of the CIA) made a surprise appearance.
